Successful race

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the participants in the Run for Fun(d$) and the students and staff of Carmel High, I would like to thank you for your sponsorship of a most successful race and a great article in the Pine Cone and Outlook.

Not only will the Scholarship Fund, the athletic program and the parent club benefit, but it was also a very positive effort toward bringing the high school and the community closer together.

Thanks, neighbor

Dear Editor:

On April 8th I suffered a fall in front of my home.

My kind neighbors called for assistance. The Red Cross Ambulance Service responded immediately. Their considerate and efficient service was a great comfort to me.

I would like to thank each and every one of them.

We all should be gratefully conscious of the valuable contribution these people make to our community.

Common Sense

Dear Editor:

Congratulations to the Common Sense Committee and the highly effective forum series it sponsored prior to the Carmel city elections.

We understand that the committee's expenditure was approximately $1,000 which was shared by 11 concerned citizens.

The Carmel Board of Realtors is donating a check to this worthwhile group to help offset the expenses incurred by this community minded project.

Big Sur advice

Dear Editor:

We commend you for your editorial, "More light, less heat needed for fate of Big Sur."

Hopefully, people will heed your advice and become familiar with all the issues involving the future of the Big Sur Coast. Interested persons would do well to acquaint themselves with the comprehensive factual analysis of the Big Sur Foundation you recently published as a supplement, as well as Senator Cranston's and Congressman Panetta's proposed legislation.

We are pleased that you will act as a forum for rational, balanced debate on the subject. Thus far, the scare tactics that have been used have prevented an objective look at the issues. And we hope that those who may have felt intimidated for various reasons will speak out for what they believe will be best for Big Sur.

River erosion

Dear Editor:

The use of automobiles to prevent erosion along the banks of Carmel River should not only be permitted but actively encouraged. Recent photographs of the river banks (Outlook and Pine Cone, April 3, 1980) indicate that larger American-made models are in much wider use than smaller foreign cars.

With thousands of auto workers being laid off in Detroit and elsewhere, curtailing yet another use of large, domestically produced vehicles seems to be a policy of neglect bordering on criminal.

Short memory

Dear Editor:

Your organization has a short memory.

For the second time in as many years I must inform you that I was not appointed to the Planning Commission by Gunnar Norberg, as stated in a news item in the April 24 issue.

Gunnar has drawn enough flak from The Pine Cone without being blamed for my appointment.

Let us keep the record straight.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Sharing unselfishly is a real gift

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL
The Easter invocation
delivered to the Carmel Rotary Club

This is a unique week for not every year do the Jewish Passover and both the Western and Orthodox Holy Week coincide. There is no better time than this to meditate on our great Judeo-Christian tradition of charity: giving, sharing and loving.

If we look at children honestly, without sentimentality we are forced to admit that they are grasping, mercenary, egocentric monsters. Children must be taught to share; to give. Our work is cut out for us when we attempt to convince children that it is more blessed to give than it is to receive. One of the dividends of growing up is the diminished pleasure of "getting" and the increased pleasure of giving.

The famous World War I Cardinal Archbishop of Maline in Belgium, Desire Joseph Mercier, told us that we must not only give what we have but we must also give what we are.

We know that gifts of things can be bribes. This is well known to selfish children, con artists, blackmailers and hostage holders. Real gifts are the sharing of time, interest, self and compassion.

O Lord, teach us early in life to give of ourselves unselfishly. If we remain selfish it means we haven't matured, that we haven't given up.

O Lord, help us to act our age.

Pine Knots

Carmel's money tree

By AL EISNER

I'VE GOT A MODEST proposal for our city fathers (and mother) to contemplate.

I think every single resident of Carmel should get a $50 cash rebate every year from our bulging city treasury . . . a Reverse Property Tax, if you will.

In case you think the idea is far out, scatter-brained or unprecedented, read this excerpt from the last edition of Newsweek:

"While local officials around the U.S. struggled with budget gaps last week, the people of Alaska were enjoying a financial windfall. Gov. Jay S. Hammond abolished the state income tax for most Alaskans this year and authorized cash dividends that could mean a benefit of up to $2,000 for every adult resident.

"The boon was authorized by the state legislature because of Alaska's embarrassment of oil riches: the state's share of the proceeds from the wells in Prudhoe Bay created a budget surplus of nearly $2 billion this year, and it may grow to $23 billion by 1985.

"Under the new annual share-the-wealth plan, the state's 400,000 residents will receive at least $50 apiece for each year they have lived in Alaska since it became a state in 1959."

The City of Carmel-By-The-Sea enjoys an equivalent annual bonanza for a village of our size — the hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes paid by tourists who stay in our inns and motels, and who dine in the many restaurants Carmel has to offer.

This incredible inflow of dollars makes it possible for residents of the city to enjoy the finest quality services (top-notch fire protection and perhaps the finest police protection in the world, for example) without having to pay any property taxes, or virtually none. A minor property tax is imposed to support our Harrison Memorial Library.

AT THIS WRITING, Carmel has a surplus — sitting in bank time deposits — of some $2 million. There are various schemes dreamed up by members of the city council on how to spend this surplus. Many have proven to be highly controversial.

A cash rebate of $50 per resident would only amount to $225,000 per year. This could be paid out of the interest being earned on the fat surplus, without ever touching the principal.

Does anyone want to place a bet on how the residents of Carmel would vote if the matter were brought before the electorate?

Such a reverse tax could have many salutory effects. It would be a great help to many of Carmel's older citizens who are trying to manage on fixed incomes during a period of runaway inflation. Matter of fact, I think we ought to double the cash rebate to any Carmel citizen who is receiving Social Security benefits. That would add another $100,000 a year to the total amount to be distributed — and we would still be able to leave the principal intact.

MORE IMPORTANTLY, though, it would serve to remind Carmelites of the relationship that exists between the city and its reliance on tourism to fund its activities. It is estimated that almost 75 percent of our total city budget of more than $2 million is directly taken care of by revenues from the business district in the form of motel taxes, sales taxes, business license taxes and other fees derived from business activity.

Then, perhaps, some of the extremists who complain bitterly about the inconvenience they suffer by the influx of visitors when they try to park downtown during a busy weekend, may reflect on the benefits we enjoy from the dollars left behind by travelers.

I do not minimize the other problems caused by the flight of residentially-oriented business from the downtown area or other problems caused by congestion in the business district.

I do hope, however, that the new city council will adopt a more balanced viewpoint when they consider legislation to further the interests of the residents of our enchanted village . . . at least we should all be aware of where the money comes from.

Gunnar Norberg: an appreciation

Some people have whims of iron, but Gunnar Norberg is best known for his dreams made of stainless steel.

It's easy to say we know all about Gunnar, and thank him for what he has done, but it seems fitting to mention some of the specifics of his service to Carmel-by-the-Sea, and to the "sphere of influence" which he helped define.

As many have done over the years, Gunnar and the charming Barbara arrived as tourists, vacationers in 1940.

For eighteen years, working as a travel agent, he became increasingly interested in the operation of his town. He spent endless hours digging information and educating himself about the school board and the council. By 1958, he decided to run for the council, and was warmly endorsed by the Pine Cone/ Cymbal which said:

"Gunnar Norberg has as much knowledge of Carmel problems and how the city government operates as a candidate can have without having served on the council. When issues of importance are on the council agenda, Gunnar is in the audience to speak up as a citizen, as a representative of a group, or just to sit and listen if things are progressing as they should. We know his attitudes, his appreciation of Carmel values, and his willingness to fight for them. It's time to make it official."

And it was made official. Gunnar took his place for the first of 454 council meetings in which he had a vote, over the 22 years of service, during which he has expressed his opinions clearly, and often impressed them on major aspects of Carmel's life.

The Purpose Clause of the Municipal Code has guided his career. He took part in the process of acquiring and later the discussions about the development of Sunset Center. He was a prevailing influence in the tempestuous decision to leave the library where it is.

He has been avid in his protection of Carmel's sphere of influence, spending hundreds of hours in the supervisors' chambers in Salinas overturning challenges to Carmel's best interests as he saw them.

He took a major part in the job of protecting the Odello artichoke fields from the forces of overdevelopment. His love of theater was expressed in the work he did on the renaissance of the Forest Theater and the development of Carmel's Festival of First Plays.

Always, in the background there was a dream of a special legal status for Carmel, as a place secure from some of the pressures of the Twentieth Century.

Some of his dreams have not yet seen the implementation needed to bring them to life. Unrealized but still very real possibilities.

They include the establishment of theater quality equal to the music quality which is so abundant here; the reestablishment of modest-priced service shops in Carmel; the solution to the "Haven Concept" or Heritage City; and always the interests of the residents over and above everything else.

During the years when Gunnar was not on the council he wrote challengingly for the Pine Cone, in his series on "The Conscience of Carmel," and as a reporter. In the August 1, 1968 issue he reported on the proposed budget for the city, in an article headlined "Council wants good conduct, trims culture." His story set the tone for a renewed interest in city participation in cultural support.

Perhaps his career so far can be best summed up by a quote from his April 6, 1972 interview:

"Carmel requires extraordinary individuals willing and able to give extraordinary effort."

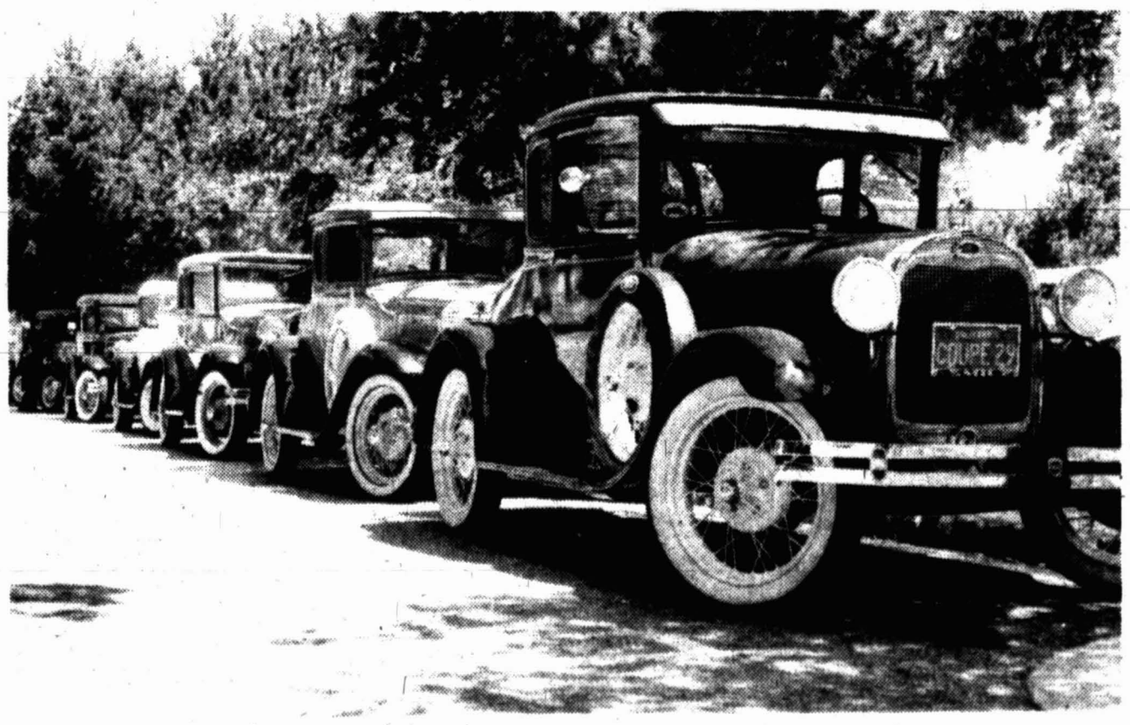

Gunnar, although you and I have often been on the same side of many questions, and often on opposite sides and given to pursuing our goals by different methods, I have always honored you for giving that extraordinary effort, and for setting for all time the highest possible standard as an extraordinary citizen. We all thank you.

(The preceding was delivered by David Hughes, a former City Councilman, at the April 23 meeting of the Carmel Rotary Club. Hughes and Norberg are both Rotarians.)

The Mayor's report:

I PROMISED TO keep you informed of items of interest to be discussed at the May 5 council meeting. At the time of this writing the complete agenda is not quite ready, but I will give you a breakdown of what I know as of now.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. and will adjourn to executive session. Upon completion of necessary business in this session the council will reconvene and the first order of business will be a public hearing regarding the transient rental ordinance.

The next order of business will be the adoption of the consent calendar. This portion usually covers administrative matters and other items which may be lifted from the consent calendar for further discussion.

The matter of a change of time to 7:30 p.m. for starting council meetings will be discussed.

Other items to appear will be an ordinance to drop salaries for councilpersons and the consideration of changes in movie-making procedures.

I WOULD LIKE TO clarify some misunderstandings regarding the preferential parking sticker.

The ordinance was originally written to cover only residents within the city limits. Furthermore, it allows additional parking time in the one hour zones only. There are no extra time allowances in any other zone.

Remember, too, that you must bring your car and the registration certificate showing your address when applying for the sticker, which costs $2. Your name and residence is also verified on voter lists. The sticker must be applied to your vehicle by a city employee.

Please remember that this is a trial period for this new system and time alone will tell what the final outcome will be.

GOOD PROGRESS has been made on the Forest Hill Park.

Final marking and waxing of the shuffleboard courts are completed. City crews are installing some of the playground equipment and horseshoe courts.

On May 10 the Rotary Club will be furnishing and installing the balance of the playground equipment.

Planting has started and, weather permitting, the balance of this phase will be completed soon.

This park will provide fun for old and young alike.

Let a smile be your umbrella!
Mayor Barney

Council to discuss filmmakers

The Carmel City Council will discuss regulating the making of movies in Carmel when the Council meets for the first time, May 5, under the leadership of newly elected Mayor Barney Laiolo.

During the filming of a Columbia Pictures movie starring Chevy Chase and Goldie Hawn, April 11 and 12, in downtown Carmel, some shop owners complained of loss of business due to crowds of spectators that turned out to watch the filming of a bank robbery scene.

City Councilman Howard Brunn said that his Carmel Bay Company, Ocean and Lincoln, lost an estimated $2,000 in business during the shooting of the film due to crowd control problems.

Brunn made his complaint during the April 17 meeting of the City Council.

Other business owners have echoed Brunn's complaint during the two days the movie company was in town, he said.

During the April 24 meeting of the Business License and Code Review Board, Chairman Douglas Peterson introduced the topic of films made in Carmel, commenting: "One of the considerations of the current ordinance pertaining to the making of movies in Carmel is the effect on the economic welfare of the business in the community."

Some of the suggestions to come out of the meeting that Peterson will take to the City Council include changing the existing ordinance to include restricting the hours permitted for filming; requiring applicants (film makers) to obtain the written consent of business owners in the affected areas; increasing permit fees; studying other cities' ordinances (specifically the city of Monterey); and thoroughly reviewing the current ordinance with the city attorney.

The City Council is expected to ask the city attorney to draft an ordinance based on recommendations to come out of their May 5 meeting.

The Village:

Plan would abolish most transient rentals

TRANSIENT RENTALS will become illegal in all residential districts of Carmel, with certain exceptions, if a proposed ordinance is approved by the City Council.

The ordinance, which basically bans rentals for less than 30 days, is an agenda item for the May 5 council meeting. It was recommended by the Planning Commission.

Although an ordinance prohibiting transient rentals is already on the books in Carmel, the new ordinance would establish enforcement and registration procedures for transient rentals.

The proposed ordinance, which amends Part X of the City Code, also provides for exceptions to the ordinance that will enable permanent residents to rent their homes on a transient basis under closely regulated guidelines.

Planning Commission Chairman Robert Stephenson favors the ordinance.

"The town is a residential town. If the City Council doesn't pass this ordinance into law, motel owners are going to interpret that as tacit sanction for the annexation of the motel business all over town," Stephenson said.

By annexation, Stephenson said he means motel owners buying private homes for weekend rentals.

A background paper the Planning Commission provided to the council, dated April 1, noted that the city was told in 1978 that a number of dwelling units in the residential district were being rented on a transient basis.

Dwelling units are defined in the ordinanee as: all multiple-family dwellings, condominiums, apartments, cooperative apartments and single-family homes.

It became more apparent to the Planning Commission that problem existed when it was made aware the rentals were being arranged through real estate offices, the paper asserts.

About 130 letters were received from people who either rented on a transient basis or owned dwellings for that purpose. The letters were received while the Planning Commission was studying transient rentals.

The letters, plus testimony during public hearings, indicated there were more transient rentals than the Planning Commission had realized.

"The situation creates a mockery of the residential district for single-family homes," according to the Planning Commission background paper.

The hearings also indicated a need for permanent residents to have special times for transient occupancy of their homes.

Planning Director Robert Griggs used the Bach Festival and Bing Crosby Golf Tournament as examples of occasions when exceptions written into the ordinance might apply.

THE FOLLOWING ARE NOT considered transient occupancies under the ordinance:

— Occupancy by friends or relatives when no rent or anything else of value is given in exchange for the occupancy.

— Occupancy by owners.

— Rental of a dwelling unit or any part thereof for not less than a week to provide occupancy while the permanent occupant is on vacation or business elsewhere, conditional on the permanent occupant living there for not less than 270 days during any 12-month period in which transient rentals occur.

Permanent residents will register dwellings qualifying for exceptions under the proposed ordinance with the city clerk. The registration will specify a period of time for the rental, name and mailing address of the renter and other information the city clerk may require. A separate registration will be required for each rental.

No fee will be charged for the registration.

It will be unlawful under the proposed ordinance for any person to "Arrange, negotiate, advertise or otherwise act to create a transient occupancy, whether the person is an owner, tenant, real estate broker, real estate sales person or apy person ... and so acting shall be a misdemeanor," according to the language of the ordinance.

The ordinance would replace any other ordinance on transient rentals in the Municipal Code.

Council faces real estate time-sharing

THE IMPACT OF real estate time-sharing on Carmel will be discussed May 5 by the City Council.

"Time-sharing is a type of interest in real estate," City Attorney George Brehmer told the Pine Cone, "that has arisen as the result of the jet age." The Council will take up the matter at his suggestion.

"Time-sharing programs enable someone to buy an interest in a condominium, for example," Brehmer said, "one month out of the year. The owner of that time-share may rent part or all of that time to another individual, receive the proceeds and enjoy the appreciation (of the market value of the condominium), or he may trade time slots with someone with interests in other geographic areas."

ANOTHER TIME-SHARING CONCEPT involves the purchase of a motel or hotel by a group.

"Each person who purchases a share in the motel buys a one-month time slot," Brehmer said.

"If you take a 20-unit motel in Carmel that is sold on a time-share basis, with 12 different owners of each unit, you have as many as 240 owners of the same motel.

"This will result in more cash for the seller of the motel, but will result in higher taxes for the real property.

"The loss in hostelry taxes could be substantial (to the city).

"During the council meeting, we will be discussing the direct economic interest of the city and talking about the effect of time-sharing in the residential district," Brehmer said.

"Motels located in the residential district through use permits could not legally operate on a time-sharing basis, nor could houses located in the residential district be sold under the time-sharing plan," Brehmer added.

The Pine Cone interviewed Elizabeth Wright, a licensed real estate associate with Merit McBride Realtors in Carmel, who has several years' experience in time-sharing.

She said the time-sharing concept originated in Hawaii some years ago and has spread throughout the world.

"There are no tax advantages (to time-share buyers)," she said. "It is just a nice self-indulgence."

Wright bought a one-bedroom condominium in Seattle in 1971 from a time-sharing group for $7,100 that will ensure her a two-week stay "practically anywhere" for 40 years.

"You just make reservations in advance," she said, "and the place is yours for your allotted time-share.

"I believe it is a good trend," Wright said, "but the people who originate these plans can't be too greedy.

"Some of them are," she said. "They should be kept in line."

THE TREND IN TIME-SHARING in real estate has grown significantly in recent years, Wright said. Wright added that at a real estate convention she attended in October "there were many seminars offered having to do with time-sharing."

Brehmer said that during the May 5 City Council meeting, "we will be discussing the extent of the city ordinance regulation that is desirable in this area (time-sharing), as well as state regulation, the pros and cons of enacting ordinances and the gathering of information to form a fact base."

The memo Brehmer plans to submit to the council will also deal in general terms with condominium conversions and stock cooperatives, he said.

A driver's view of racing in GT car at Laguna Seca

By LEIGH D. FOOTE III

CONJURE UP AN IMAGE of speed.

Picture yourself strapped into a narrow, form-fitting seat, gripping a small but thickly-padded steering wheel. Engine speed on the tach translates to just shy of 150 mph. Unlike the floating feel of a street car at half that speed, you have a sense of being pressed to the road.

As you approach the rise before the first turn, still accelerating, you're very conscious that past the crest the car will become weightless, creating the sensation of a free-falling elevator.

Your foot wants to lift from the throttle pedal. Your mind resists the urge, because anything less than flat-out is too slow. Competitive drive is fighting survival caution. But before this ever becomes thought you're through Turn One, rapidly closing on barrier-lined Turn Two.

WHEN TOP GT RACE drivers from throughout North America and Europe gather this weekend for the Monterey Triple Crown they will share this experience lap after lap at Laguna Seca Raceway.

Over Laguna Seca's twisting 1.9-miles, nine turns loom as opposition for car and driver each lap. Last spring's fastest Triple Crown qualifiers averaged close to 110 mph on each round, just 9 mph less than the absolute lap record set in October 1979 in a CanAm car and more than 25 mph faster than the best laps driven by Stirling Moss, Jimmy Clark, Phil Hill and many other Grand Prix greats who raced regularly at Laguna Seca in the early '60s.

Qualifiers for the 1980 decade opener at Laguna Seca Raceway have their sights set on the once-thought-to-be-unbreakable sub-one minute lap. That was first broken by Vic Elford at the wheel of one of Jim Hall's legendary Chaparral CanAm cars during the 1970 Monterey Grand Prix and has remained untouched by any Grand Touring car.

Making this target realistic is a new breed of super Porsche Turbos, the Kremer K3, and Jim Busby's March BMW/Chevy M-1. Daytona, Sebring and Road Atlanta, the three IMSA GT races up to press time, have all been captured by K3s that have topped the favored factory Porsche 935 Turbos. M-1s driven by Busby and Olympic decathalon champion Bruce Jenner have been fast, but unlucky, with the BMW 24-valve straight six engine.

THE SLEEKER AND more powerful Kremer cars outrunning Porsche factory cars in the U.S. are just an extension of a rivalry from the old country. The Kremer brothers, Erwin and Manfred (the engine builder), have re-worked Porsches for some time.

To the chagrin of the Porsche factory which does not like to be upstaged in its backyard, K3 won the German National title this year and the 24 Heures du LeMans in 1979.

At the Monterey Triple Crown, K3s will be in the hands of Sebring winner John Fitzpatrick who has long been the "man-to-beat" in European GT racing; Danny Ongais (often called "On-The-Gas" for his aggressive driving); Road Atlanta victor Bill Whittington and his brother Don; Ted Field, who heads Interscope Racing; and former Corvette virtuoso John Paul.

Conspicuous by his absence from this group is Peter Gregg, perennial IMSA GT champion. Gregg will be in an ordinary Stuttgart-variety-type Porsche 935 Turbo, the basis for the Kremer K3. Apparently Gregg has chosen to remain friends with the Porsche factory that has given him faster-than-other 935s in past years. (Herein lies the story from Deutschland. The days of the Porsche 935 Turbo are numbered. Porsche has stopped importation of its trick street Turbo, wants to place the 911 series into its museum and plans to launch an all-new racing effort spearheaded by the 924 Turbo.)

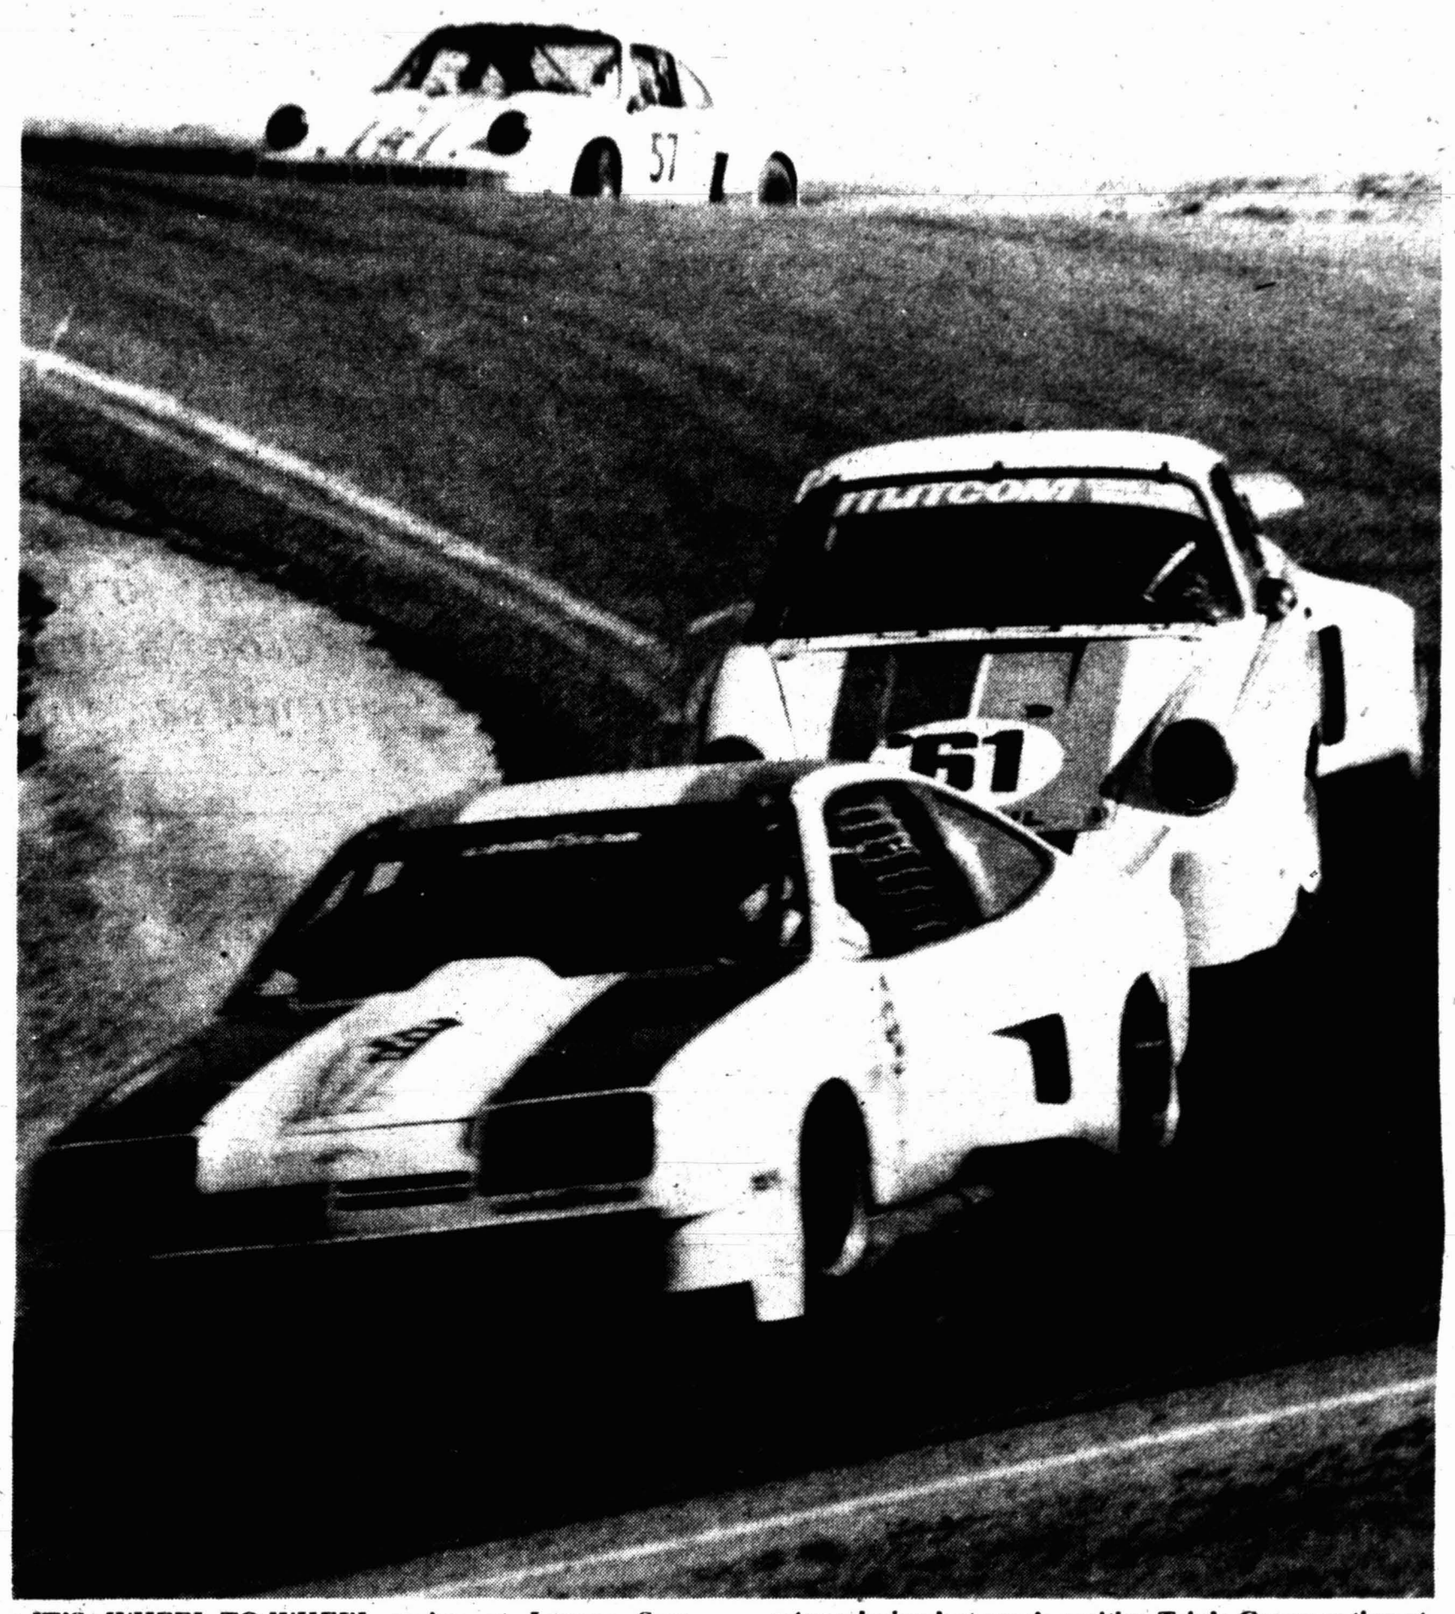

Gregg knows this is probably the last year for the current Porsche 935 Turbo/Kremer K3 to be a dominant force and is riding a bet that Porsche's next offer will give him the success previous Porsches have.

JIM BUSBY is backing his bet that 1979 will be recorded as the last Porsche 935 win at Laguna Seca with a 600 hp TRACO Chevy in his BMW M-1. Busby says he hopes that BMW will soon have a turbocharged engine and will not be bothered by the unorthodox conversion.

SUNDAY'S MONTEREY TRIPLE Crown GT race, though a long, hard 100 miles long, is considered a sprint race in which horsepower and acceleration are more vital than the reliability required by the endurance events for which the BMW engine was designed. In short, 500 BMW horses, though better harnassed and trimmer, just aren't a match for 700 Porsche Turbo-ponies on a tight course like Laguna Seca Raceway.

IT'S WHEEL-TO-WHEEL racing at Laguna Seca again this weekend. A Camaro leads a Porsche through a turn during last year's exciting Triple Crown action at the twisting 1.9-mile Monterey track.

An interesting measure of the wisdom of Busby's decision will be Bruce Jenner's performance. Jenner will drive a BMW/BMW M-1 in the race. While his motor racing experience isn't that of veteran Busby, Jenner has natural driving talent and shows the dedication to motorsport which made him the athlete-of-athletes at Montreal. Like Paul Newman, who may drive the Datsun 280Z he drove to third place at Road Atlanta in the GTU race, Jenner comes to the Triple Crown not to be seen, but to race.

MAY AT LAGUNA SECA is not only for GT competitors. What annually draws people back to Triple Crown is the action-packed combination of GT racing along with that of the GTU, Champion Spark Plug Challenge and Ford Dealers' Formula Ford Challenge races.

On several occasions, the GTU race has stolen the show from the faster, more sophisticated GT cars. Datsun, sponsor of the 1980 Monterey Triple Crown, has been the dominant manufacturer in this class for production cars which are nearly as radical as the GT cars but have an engine size of 2 liters or under. Within the Datsun ranks classic battles have been waged between rival teams and drivers like Newman, Laguna Seca GTU race record holder Don Devendorf and SCCA Champion Frank Leary.

This year, after an initial foray into IMSA-GTU racing in 1979, Mazda is out in force to knock Datsun off. To date there are eight Mazda RX-7s entered with drivers like RS Champ Walt Bohren, CanAm and GT driver Brad Friselle, Mazda team's Bob Bergstrom and Roger Mandeville.

Add Porsche 911 ace Dennis Aase and there are at least eight drivers in three makes whose records ensure a dogfight for first in GTU.

THE CHAMPION SPARK Plug Challenge entry list reads like an economy car inventory with 13 manufacturers represented. Outfitted with roll cages, moderately modified stock engines and shod with street radial tires, Champion Spark Plug Challenge cars are closely matched and as near as any car on the track to what is on the local dealer's showroom floor.

Sentimental favorite in a Renault LeCar that "just can't be that fast" is Patrick Jacquemart. Rob McFarlin, who has been runner-up in the Challenge championship standings for two years and holds the lap record at Laguna Seca, is back in his Datsun 200SX.

Oregon's Dick Gordon has always been fast at Laguna Seca in his Volvo 142E. Amos Johnson and Dennis Shaw, good old boys from Raleigh, N.C. have been frequent winners in the Champion Series and never let the crowd forget they come from door-banging NASCAR country. There will also be many old and new talents close in pursuit, hoping that this will be the race to put them into the elite group of Champion Spark Plug Challenge winners.

ROUNDING OUT the Triple Crown is a finale Sunday that may be the day's most exciting race. When the Formula Fords get the green-for-go flag anything is likely to happen.

Formula Ford is the acknowledged training ground for future greats. That victory, or even an impressive drive which could mean a step up for a young racing driver, makes for a tension-filled, spectacular competition. The daring of the SCCA amateurs who race these pure, open-wheel racing cars powered by 1600cc Ford Pinto, Capri or Cortina engines is often unmatched throughout a Monterey Triple Crown weekend.

Pay attention to the names of the leaders for they are the motorsport stars of tomorrow.

CV Master Plan: ready, set...

By STEVE HELLMAN

A FLURRY OF FINAL LEGISLATION, a bit of intrigue and some "dirty laundry" are marking the closing efforts to implement the new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The Monterey County Planning Department is scheduled to begin accepting development applications on June 6, putting in motion the Master Plan guidelines, including the quota and allocation system that allows for 2,500 new units in the Valley in the next 20 years.

Before the mechanisms of the Master Plan can be set in motion, however, the following matters must be resolved:

• The county Board of Supervisors has to appoint the five-member Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee that will evaluate and score all subdivision applications.

Criteria for appointment of the committee have been suggested by the county Planning Department, and several nominations have been received for the appointments.

• A date must be scheduled by the supervisors for the first "flight," or series of scored applications, to be received from the citizens committee and reviewed by county planners.

A tentative calendar for the review process has been submitted by the county Planning Department. It suggests Oct. 14 as the date to consider the first "flight" from the citizens committee.

• Landowners have continued to submit requests to the county for exemptions to the rezoning of the 29,000-acre Valley.

The supervisors have agreed to consider the requests as amendments to the Master Plan at a meeting in June, the date to be arranged.

• An interim ordinance prohibiting applications for development in the Valley must be lifted by the supervisors. They were scheduled to repeal the moratorium at their May 6 meeting, although this "dirty laundry" involves an unresolved lawsuit.

• The lawsuit filed by the City of Carmel and Virginia Merz of Carmel is scheduled to be heard in Monterey County Superior Court on May 21.

The trial will determine whether the supervisors erred in not ordering an environmental impact report for the Master Plan.

Efforts to implement the Master Plan could be postponed up to six months if the court rules that an EIR must be prepared.

Attorneys representing Carmel and Mrs. Merz have asked for a preliminary injunction to halt implementation of the Master Plan until the trial May 21.

First applications for subdivisions under the new Master Plan could be accepted as soon as June 6. After two weeks, the county staff would forward the applications to the new Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee for action.

Superior Court Judge Richard Silver took the request under submission on April 18, and at this writing had not ruled on the request. It was expected, however, that he will not grant the injunction because the county is not going to accept applications under the Master Plan until June 6, or after the trial.

Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos told this newspaper last week that the ordinance to repeal the moratorium on applications includes a provision that new applications not be accepted until June 6.

A BIT OF INTRIGUE has developed around the lawsuit, leading to speculation that it is not wholly supported by residents of the Valley.

The Board of Directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association actually considered joining the county in its defense against the lawsuit.

The directors of the 1,000-member organization decided at their April 16 meeting not to join as a friend of the court, although the matter was seriously considered, according to acting president Earl Moser.

Chief concern of some directors was that the lawsuit would delay implementation of the Master Plan, allowing opposition to gain momentum, Moser said last week.

"The lawsuit is not a benefit if it is going to postpone the Master Plan and rob the momentum that is now behind it," Moser said. "The opponents of the plan have been the minority voice so far, but that could change if we delay the plan."

Moser said that he conducted a telephone poll of the directors before their April 16 meeting, but that he failed to muster a majority to support participation against the lawsuit.

The directors decided last November to not ask the county to prepare an EIR for the Master Plan. Mary Ann Matthews, a resident of the Valley and member of the study committee that revised the Master Plan, requested that the directors pass a resolution for an EIR. Director Sidney Morris insisted, however, that an EIR could allow opposition to the Master Plan to grow.

A SUBCOMMITTEE of Supervisors Sam Farr and Michal Moore will recommend individuals for appointment to the Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee. They will submit their recommendations to the full board for approval at a meeting to be scheduled this month.

Farr said he has received criteria for the appointments from the county Planning Department staff. The staff recommends that a member of the committee: be a resident of the Valley; have a thorough familiarity with the Valley; be able to visualize proposed projects; have some experience in an appropriate field of biological or physical science; and have a thorough knowledge of the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Committee members will be appointed for terms of three years, Farr said, although the first five members will have staggered terms of one, two and three years. The first appointees will draw lots to determine the length of their terms, he added.

A MEMORANDUM dated April 22 from the planning department staff to Planning Director Ed DeMars suggests a calendar for the first "flight" of applications.

June 6 is selected as the date to begin accepting applications until June 30. Two weeks are recommended for the planning department staff to review the applications and forward them to the Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee.

The committee is expected to evaluate, score and rank the applications within one month, allowing the developers to submit tentative subdivision maps to the county beginning Sept. 4.

Review by the county Subdivision Committee and the environmental determination for each project by the county Planning Commission would be completed by Oct. 14 for the first "flight" to be assembled for public hearing with the planning commission.

REQUESTS FOR EXEMPTION to the rezoning of the Valley have been submitted by Gilbert Selfridge and Wilson Daniels.

Daniels owns a 31-acre parcel and Selfridge owns a 3.8-acre parcel, both in the area northwest of the intersection of Carmel Valley and Scarlett roads.

The area was rezoned from one-acre minimum to 2.5-acre minimum. The landowners want the one-acre zoning retained, noting that their property is surrounded by one-acre parcels.

The board of directors of Carmel Valley Property Owners Association actually considered joining the county in its defense against the lawsuit that challenges the Master Plan.

THE BACK COURTYARD of the Los Laureles Lodge contains old farm equipment salvaged from days when the lodge was a farmhouse. Owners of the lodge are proposing to add five buildings to the site on Carmel Valley and Rancho roads. The proposed 24,739-square-foot addition would remove 10 existing buildings, although the main lodge and other historic structures would be preserved. The lodge dates back to the late 1800s. Special classes are offered

Art and recreational classes for adults, credit classes for graduating seniors, special education courses for handicapped students, and swimming lessons will be offered in Carmel schools this summer.

The summer school program begins June 13.

A day-care program for pre-school children will be offered June 9 to August 29.

Regional Occupation Program courses will be given in parks and rural recreation; hotel/motel service occupations and agri-business occupations.

State-mandated summer courses, for which there are no fee, will include English for the foreign speaking, art and academic courses for the adult handicapped, special education courses for students, and courses at Monterey Peninsula College for seniors to complete their graduation requirements.

"The state requires certain courses every year despite budget cuts," acting superintendent William Rand said.

The non-mandated courses, however, are offered according to the enrollments, and require a fee to cover the teacher's salary, room rental and materials.

The average class fee will be about $36 for a six-week course, according to Dan Yurkovich, director of community services. He said the fee is based on $1 per hour of instruction, with most courses meeting twice a week for three hours over a six-week period.

The adult classes offered for a fee will include speed reading, French, Russian, Swedish and German. Several art classes, pottery, sewing and cooking will be available. Adult recreation will offer master swimming, tennis lessons, volleyball and basketball.

The swim program will be conducted at the Carmel High School pool, and the pool at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center. Swimming lessons will be available from 8 a.m. to noon at both pools. Recreational swimming will follow in the afternoons, and in the evenings there will be adult swimming.

The Barracudas Swim Team will continue its practice and competition for students age 9 to 17 throughout the summer.

For more information, phone Yurkovich at 624-1714.

Mock rescue attracts whale, no Jonahs

Ken Bradford unwittingly became swiming buddy to a whale last weekend and claims he was only somewhat "apprehensive."

Bradford, 23, a sheriff's deputy from Monterey, was taking part in a mock rescue operation Saturday at Monastery Beach.

Here's how he met the whale:

Bradford said he was dropped from a helicopter about 150 yards from the beach.

"I was in the water for a little while and thought I saw smoke," he said. Below the "smoke" surfaced a large, dark shape Bradford recognized. Many of those on the beach to watch the mock rescue saw the whale and estimated its length at 30 feet.

"I was apprehensive at first," Bradford said, "because a lot of time they travel in schools. I looked for others. I looked all around and below. All I saw was that one whale."

There wasn't much else for Bradford to do but look. His "rescue" helicopter wasn't due to return for about 10 minutes. The whale had surfaced about 50 yards away, Bradford said, between him and the beach.

"I would have been more concerned," Bradford told the Pine Cone, "if I had seen a dorsal fin, meaning there was a shark."

No dorsal fins appeared and Bradford spent about 10 minutes in the ocean after he saw the whale until he was "rescued" by the helicopter harness dropped to him.

The mock rescue mission was part of a two-day conference for nurses and paramedics sponsored by the California Fire, Rescue and Paramedic Association and the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. About 200 attended the conference; about 80 were on the beach.

Bradford said his encounter with the whale was really "no big deal. I was just worried that if he got too close and rubbed up against me, there would be danger from barnacles on his skin. And I was worried about him flipping his tail.

"But they don't bite, so I wasn't worried about that."

Library offers three films

Three diverse films that explore ancient Greece, the world of animals and restless volcanoes will be screened Thursday, May 1 at the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey. Everyone is welcome to attend the free program at 2 p.m.

The 70-minute show begins with Greeks in Search of Meaning. A segment of the Western Civilization-Majesty and Madness series, the film recreates concerns and achievements of the Greeks of Athens in the fifth century as they struggled with problems of freedom and the meaning of life.

The behavior and "languages" of geese, fish and mammals are examined in How Animals Speak. The film documents how animals transmit vital information when guiding their offspring and defending against predators and maintaining relationships.

Volcanoes — Exploring the Restless Earth, presents scenes of volcanic activity that formed two islands off the coast of Iceland in the 1960s.

The weekly film program will continue May 8 with the screening of two films, London and Man and the Snake.

Marine lab open house May 3

A touch tank that re-creates an intertidal tidepool and displays of marine research are promised at the Granite Canyon Laboratory Open House Saturday, May 3 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. The public is welcome to view the exhibits at no charge.

Part of the California Fish and Game Department, the lab specializes in Dungeness crab, red abalone and Pismo clam spawning research. Biologists will be on hand to answer questions about the work. At approximately noon, researchers have scheduled the spawning of a male and female abalone.

In addition, an exhibit of sea otter posters, a preserved sea otter and pelt may be seen.

Displayed throughout the day will be a tidepool filled with starfish, urchins, abalone and other tidepool animals representative of the Central Coast.

The Granite Canyon Lab is located nine miles south of Ocean Avenue, Carmel, on Highway 1.

For more information, phone 649-2870.

CV Ranch intersection will be discussed

Improvement alternatives for the intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads will be the subject of a public hearing on Tuesday, May 6. It will be in the County Courthouse, Salinas, at a time to be announced.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will consider four alternatives, from installing traffic signals to an underpass that would require a 30-foot cut in the hillside.

Developers of the Carmel Valley Ranch are required to pay for it. Cost could be an estimated $1 million if an underpass is needed. The county Public Works Department has recommended an underpass to handle additional traffic from the development.

The first phase of 80 condominiums is under construction at the development, at Robinson Canyon and Holt roads. The developer will be required to improve the intersection before construction can begin on the second phase of 60 condominiums. A total of 500 condominiums, a 100-unit hotel and golf course are proposed.

COLLEGE ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

THE ACADEME OFFERS ALL DETERMINED, COLLEGE-BOUND STUDENTS A FAR-REACHING AND COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAMME OF COLLEGE BOARD PREPARATION, DESIGNED TO MAKE CERTAIN THAT THEY SHALL BE ABLE TO SUCCESSFULLY HANDLE ONE OF THE MORE IMPORTANT CHALLENGES OF THEIR ENTIRE ACADEMIC HIGH SCHOOL CAREERS.

That challenge is mastering the Scholastic Aptitude Tests whose score determines to which colleges they may reasonably expect to apply and be accepted. At the completion of this course you can be assured that the Scholastic Aptitude Test will hold no surprises for you and you will be fully prepared to do justice to your own abilities acquired throughout your High School years and be confident of the final outcome.

PROGRAMME OF INSTRUCTION

Forty-eight hours of training in basic college board mathematics with applications to quantitative comparison and simple multiple choice questions found in the MATHEMATICS APTITUDE TESTS of the Scholastic Aptitude Tests, as taught in the following twelve sections:

Section 1	Angle relationships	Section 7	Percent
Section 2	Right triangle relationships	Section 8	Areas and perimeters and fundamental geometry
Section 3	Arithmetic of square roots	Section 9	Inequalities & signed numbers
Section 4	Exponents	Section 10	Simple algebraic equations
Section 5	Fractions	Section 11	Divisibility, odd & even integers
Section 6	Decimals	Section 12	Coordinate Geometry

At the completion of these twelve sections, a comprehensive session in quantitative comparison applications to fundamental geometry shall be provided to the students, tying everything together.

The remaining time will be spent going through at least (12) half-hour MATHEMATICS APTITUDE TESTS which had been assigned for homework and which are comparable to the actual mathematics examinations expected.

Forty-eight hours of English instruction in support of the VERBAL APTITUDE TESTS, including vocabulary training, providing coverage for 2,400 difficult words usually found on the SATs. This training, combined with etymological studies of prefixes, verb, adjective and noun suffixes, and roots of Greek and Latin derivation, complete with their meanings and examples of each, is guaranteed to BUILD YOUR VOCABULARY. Included in this training are techniques to handle analogies and sentence completions. Additional training in the TECHNIQUES OF READING COMPREHENSION, going through questions from nine practice reading comprehension passages of five questions each is included.

The remaining time is spent thoroughly reviewing at least (25) half-hour VERBAL APTITUDE TESTS which have been assigned for homework and which resemble the actual expected examinations. These tests contain (40) questions in the following four categories: analogies, sentence completion, reading comprehension and vocabulary.*

The ACADEME believes a (5) week course is optimum and that a hard-working student participating in this programme should be able to muster an additional 128 points on the SAT exams.

Evening classes are being held at the Monterey Institute of International Studies.

Weekend sessions are being held at the Montery Peninsula College.

Special practice examinations shall be held at the Seaside Multi-Use Center.

OUR CLASSES ARE LIMITED TO 16 PER CLASS
AND A MAXIMUM OF 32 STUDENTS FOR THIS PROGRAM.

REGISTRATION TAKES PLACE MAY 4th AT THE MONTEREY PENINSULA COLLEGE IN ROOM H-204 FROM 10:30 A.M. TO 5:30 P.M.

COST FOR PROGRAM - $169.45

*Analogies measure abilities to analyze word relationships and recognition of things that are parallel in some way. Sentence completion measures abilities to use vocabulary and recognize logical consistency in sentences.

Late Registration takes place at the Seaside Multi-Use Center, 5:45 P.M., Monday, May 5

Garland Ranch Regional P

BY THE END OF the year, Garland Ranch Regional Park may triple in size to encompass the southern ridgeline of Carmel Valley from Robinson Canyon at Mid-Valley to Robles Del Rio, behind Carmel Valley Village.

Acquisition of the Condon family's 636 acres has more than doubled the park land, adding Garzas and Redwood Canyons to the existing 541 acres of oak forest, ridgeline and grassland.

The deal was concluded April 21 by the Condons and Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District through a gift of 178 acres, a $100,000 purchase financed mainly through a federal grant, and two, five-year $1 leases.

MRS. GENEVIEVE de DAMPIERRE of Carmel, who owns 628 acres just east of the Condon land, is considering giving 530 acres to the park.

An appraisal is under way on the property, and negotiations with the park district are expected to begin within a month, according to her son, Tony De Sugny of Carmel Valley.

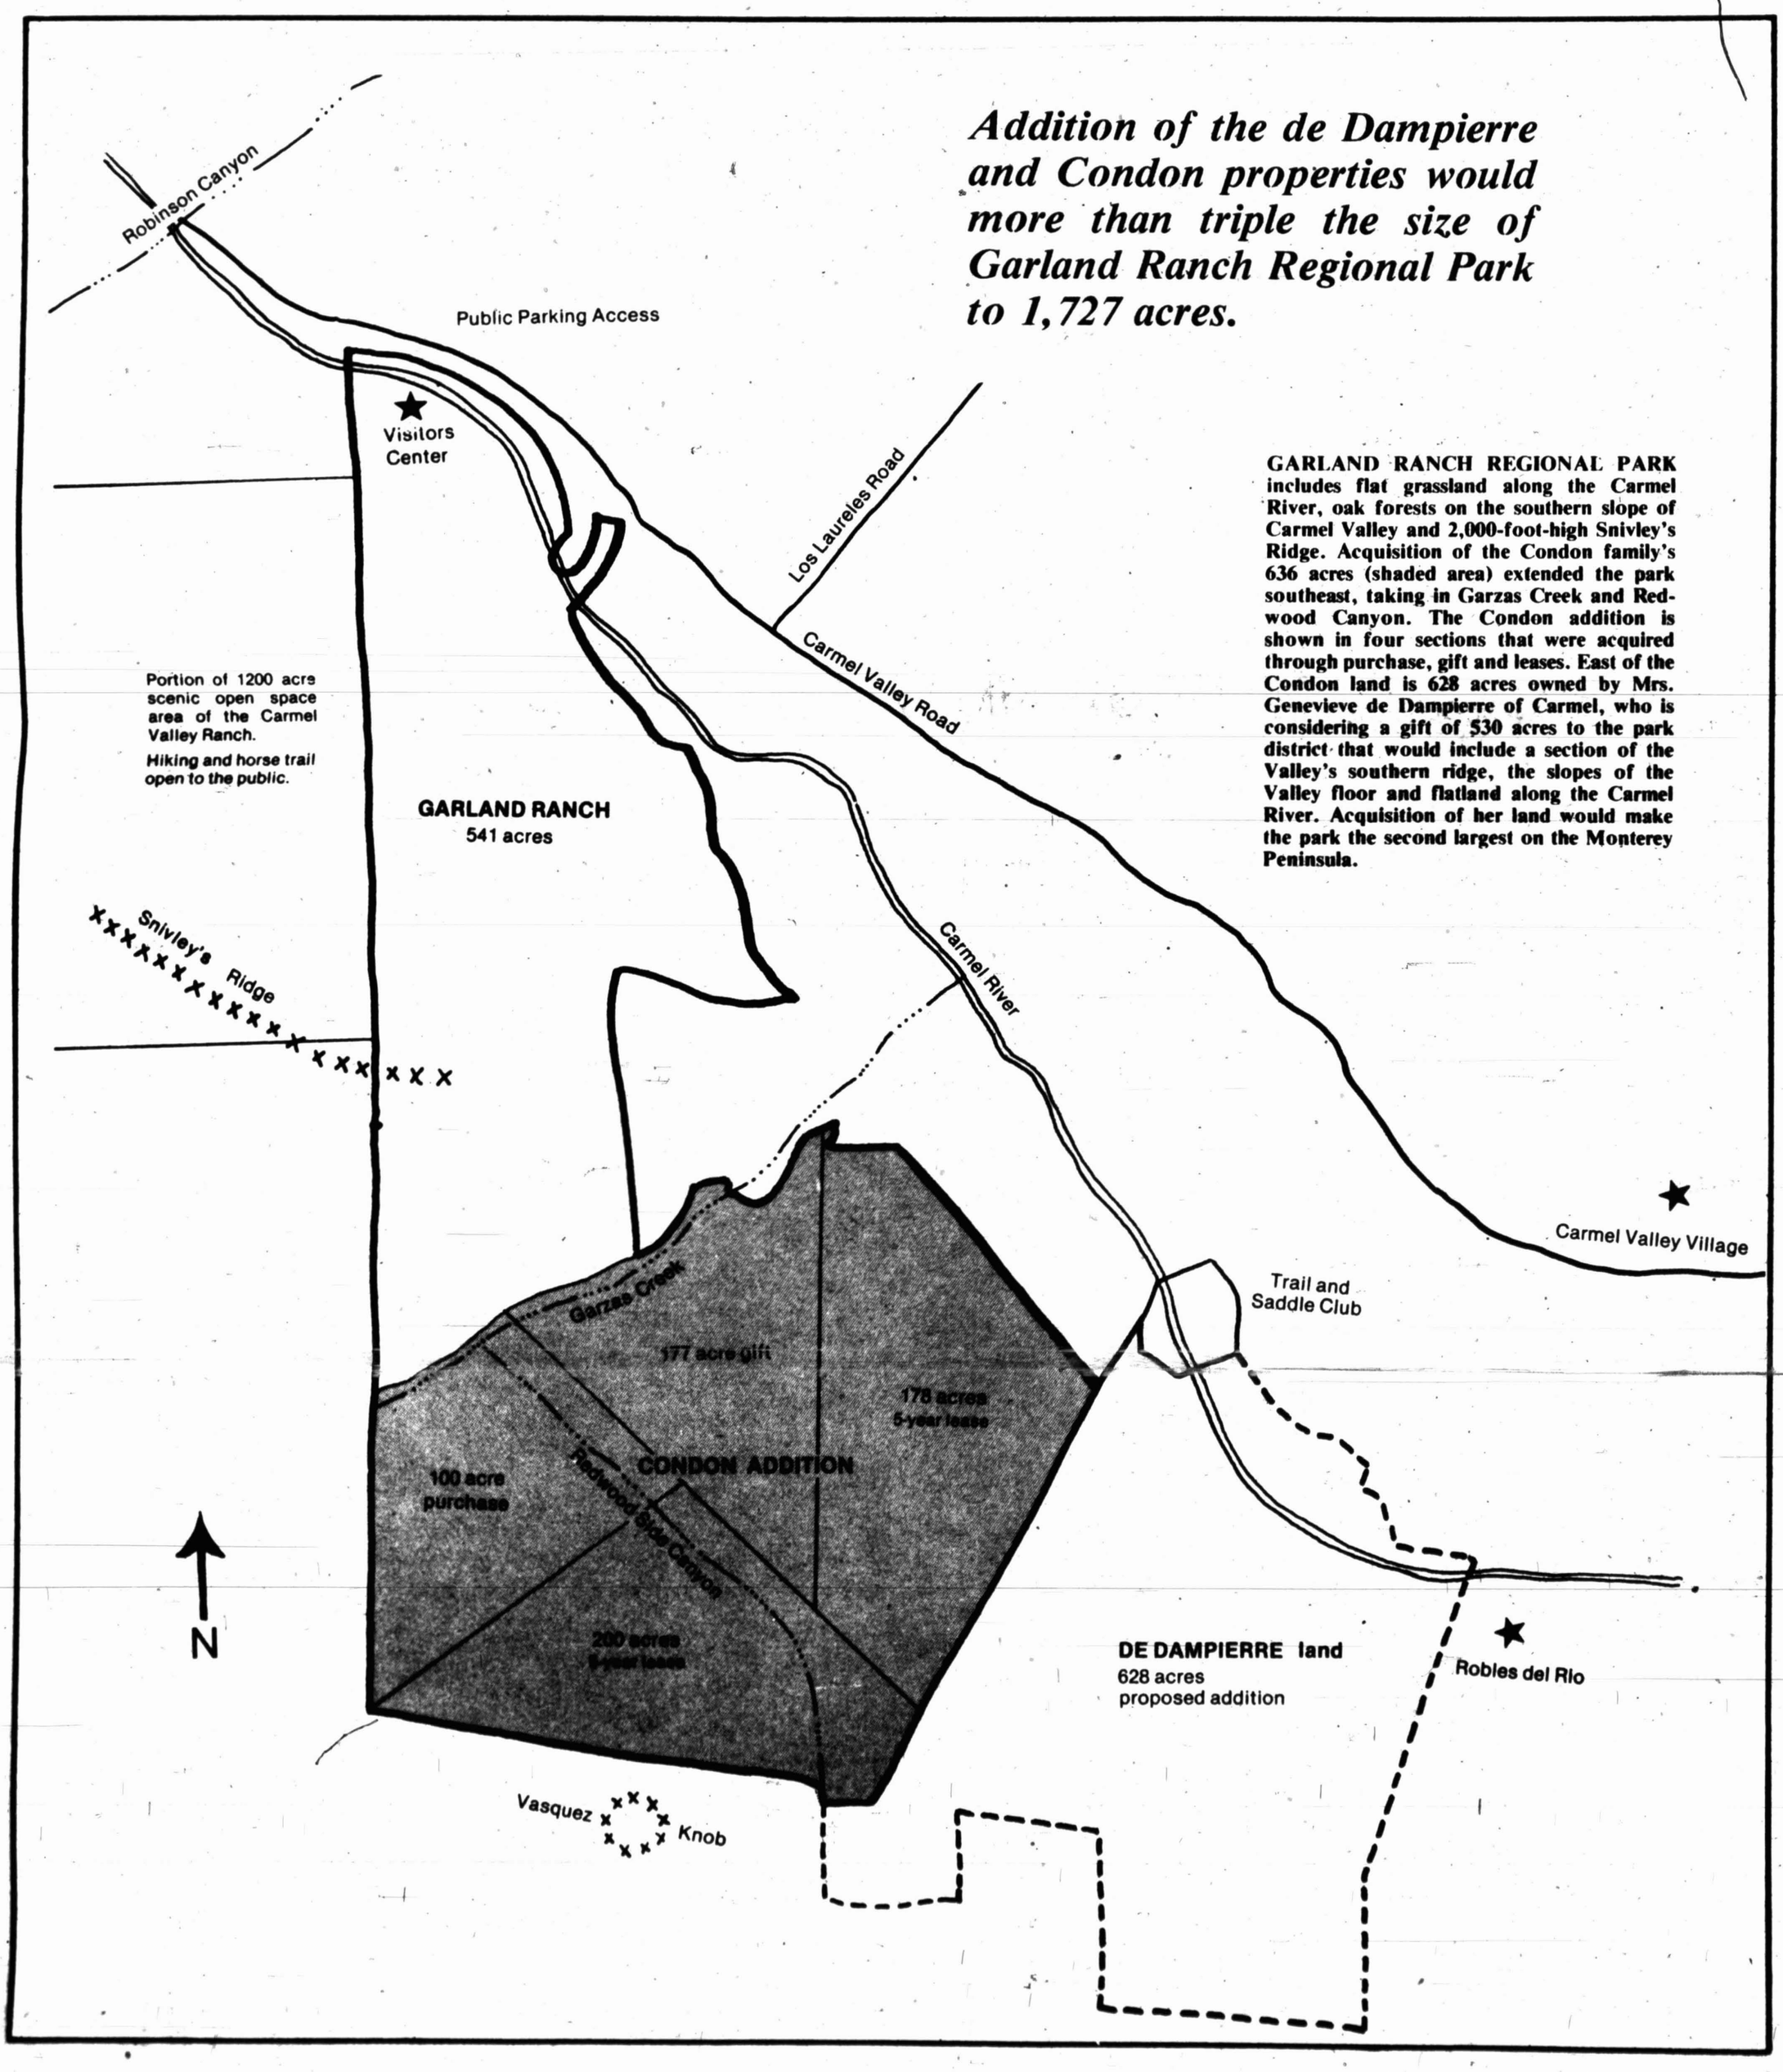

Adding de Dampierre's 530 acres would swell the park to 1,727 acres. It would add flatland along the Carmel River, steep slopes up to the ridge and the ridgeline from just east of Garzas Canyon to the Robles Del Rio subdivision.

De Sugny told this newspaper last week he has been meeting for six months with the Trust for Public Land, a nonprofit organization that will be liaison in negotiations between the park district and landowner.

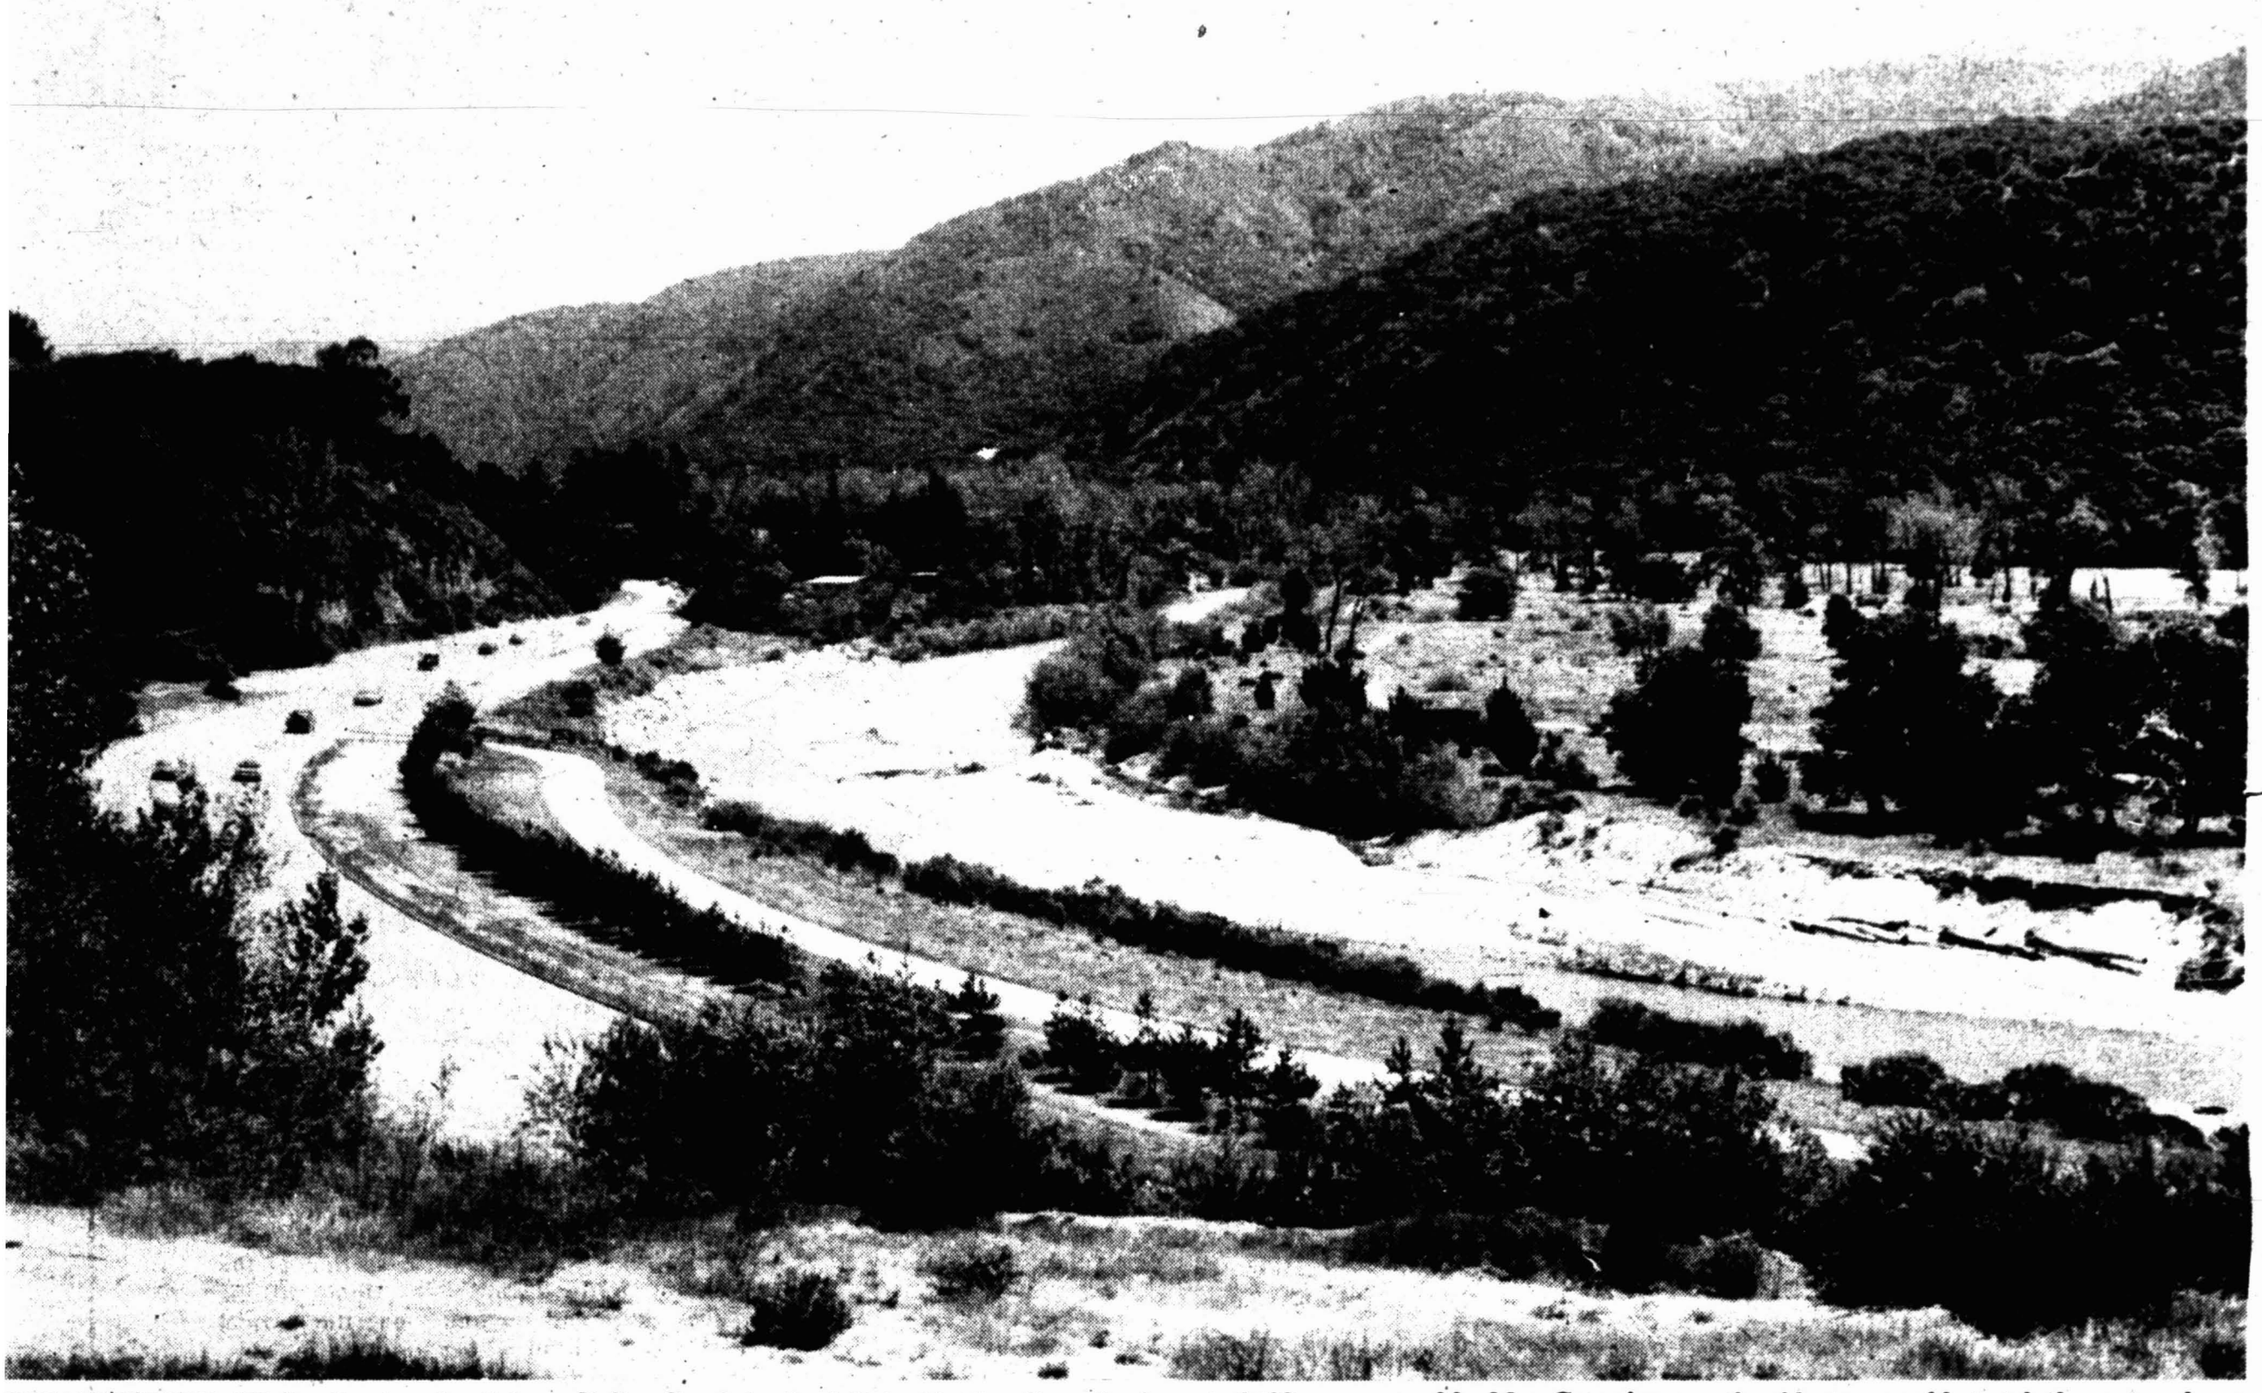

"The Trust for Public Land has offered its expertise to see if our gift is feasible," De Sugny said. "After the appraisal, we expect to enter serious negotiations. It'll be about one month before we make an offer to the park district."

TWO PORTIONS OF de Dampierre's land will be retained for the proposed River Oaks subdivision. De Sugny said 24 lots are proposed on 84.4 acres, with 20 lots along De Los Helechos, at the east end of the property, and four at the west end above the Trail and Saddle Club. The average lot size would be 1.4 acres. A preliminary subdivision map has been

Park may triple in size

THE ADDITION OF the Condon family's 536 acres to Garland Ranch Regional Park includes the second ridge in this view looking east toward the park. Snivley's Ridge is shown in front to the right, with Carmel Valley Road to the left beside the Carmel River. Garzas Canyon and Garzas Creek, behind Snivley's Ridge, were also added to the park in the Condon deal. The most distant ridge may soon be added to the park. It is part of 628 acres owned by Mrs. Genevieve de Dampierre of Carmel, who is considering a gift of 530 acres to the park district. Acquisition of her land from the valley floor to the ridgetop would stretch the eastern boundary of the park to Robles Del Rio subdivision, behind Carmel Valley Village. (Alan McEwen photo) submitted to the Monterey County Planning Department for review.

De Sugny said the proposed 24-lot subdivision and the 530-acre gift to the park district were the "best solutions to my mother's landholdings." De Damierre has owned the land for 20 years.

Gary Tate, park district manager, said he could not comment on de Dampierre's plan since no formal offer had been made to the district's board of directors.

THE DEAL WITH THE CONDONS, Tate said, was made possible through a $72,000 federal Land and Water Conservation Grant, administered through the state Department of Parks and Recreation. Another $28,000 from the park district concluded the $100,000-purchase of 100 acres on the back, southern section of the Condon's land that takes in the confluence of Garzas and Redwood Canyons just east of the park.

The gift of 178 acres added Garzas Creek and the lower, heavily-wooded slopes of Garzas Canyon. One of the five-year leases is for 200 acres in the southern part of the family ranch, taking in the major portion of Redwood Canyon and the thickly-forested slopes of Vasquez Knob. The other lease is for 178 acres, covering the highest elevations of the ranch.

Hiking and equestrian trails will be built on the new land to provide access to Garzas Canyon. Tate said they should be completed by summer.

The developer of Carmel Valley Ranch has granted an easement to the Park District for 1,200 acres on the west side of the park. The 1,200 acres are to be placed in permanent open space and hiking trails built to extend the use of the park to the private land.

The open space extends from Robinson Canyon, along Snivley's Ridge to the present western boundary of the park.

The original 541 acres were acquired by the park district in 1975 from the late William Garland. The cost to the district was $1.1 million, or $2,038 per acre. That included a contribution of $250,000 from Garland, who was killed in a plane accident in 1975.

With the addition of the Condon land, the park becomes one of the largest in the area, second only to 5,000-acre Toro Park, Tate said.

"Do you think the Mayor knows all about me?"
"Sure to, dear, he reads Ben, you see,"
Says Alice.

"IF I WERE MAYOR"

If I were Mayor of Carmel town,
I'd gavel them up and gavel them down,
I'd read them the riot act, you'd see,
For acting so very ungentlemanly.
I'd make very sure that homework was done,
So meetings would end at ten, not one.
I'd be sure that appointments were made
To only those qualified by rules that I laid.
I'd listen to what everyone had to say,
Then make up my mind and do it my way.
Yup, that's what I'd do, if I were the Mayor,
But now I don't need to. We've got Barney the Fair.

Just in case you were wondering where I've been, it's been two years since this started, and I figured you wouldn't mind too much if I snuck off for a couple of weeks. After all, you were all busy with the elections!

Poaching for steelhead called serious problem in Carmel River

By STEVE HELLMAN

ILLEGAL FISHING FOR STEELHEAD trout in the Carmel River has become a "serious" problem this spring because of clear, low-running waters and an unusual late-season run of the prized fish.

State Game Warden Ed Magnusen reports that he has been working "dawn to dusk" catching poachers along the Carmel River and other coastal streams between Monterey Peninsula and Big Sur.

"I've written quite a few citations, seized equipment and had to physically arrest one person," Magnusen told this newspaper last week.

State game warden working 'dawn to dusk" catching steelhead poachers along the Carmel River and other coastal streams.

Snagging and other illegal catch methods are misdemeanors punishable by a fine up to $500 and six months in jail. Fishing during the off-season carries similar penalties.

THE WINTER FISHING season for the steelhead ended Feb. 1, and the summer season does not open until May 24, Magnusen said.

Fishing is prohibited from February to May because the adult steelhead migrate upstream from the ocean to spawn and the young fish make their first migration downstream to the sea.

"This time of the year, during the spring flows, the juvenile steelhead are moving out to the ocean. People catching the fish are destroying the young steelhead population," Magnusen said.

The steelhead is a rainbow trout that lives in the ocean, returns each year to the headwaters of coastal streams, and spawns in sandy shoals. The banks of the Los Padres Reservoir in Carmel Valley are a favorite spawning ground, and a "fish ladder" is provided for the steelhead to climb the 85-foot-high dam into the reservoir.

A prized fish among anglers, the steelhead grows much larger and has a greater fighting spirit than its strictly freshwater rainbow cousin.

The young steelhead live in freshwater streams for two years before instinctively taking their first journey downstream to the ocean during the high water flows that follow winter rains. The migrations are normally completed by the end of March.

POACHERS HAVE FOUND their illegal bounty easier than usual this year because the steelhead were still migrating as late as last week, Magnusen said.

"High, muddy water is the steelhead's best protection, but they've been easy game in the low and clear running water this spring," he said. "No adult steelhead were in the Carmel River this time last year."

Magnusen said that he finds poachers at work along the Carmel River wherever there are pools for the fish to congregate. He usually issues a citation, but in one instance had to make an arrest.

Mark Belangee of Carmel Valley was arrested on April 12 along the river near Paso Hondo in Carmel Valley Village. Magnusen said Belangee was apprehended and charged with resisting arrest after refusing to identify himself and cooperate with the game warden.

State game wardens have the authority to make an arrest, Magnusen noted. There are three game wardens in Monterey County, and Magnusen covers a territory from the Monterey Peninsula down the Big Sur coast and inland into the Los Padres National Forest.

Regular fishing season opened April 26 in California. However, the coastal trout fishing season, which covers fishing in all coastal streams, does not open until May 24, Memorial Day weekend.

Magnusen explained that the coastal trout season opens later to protect the steelhead during the migratory months. Until the season opens, all fishing is prohibited in coastal streams, including the Carmel, Big Sur, Little Sur and other rivers along the Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Luis Obispo county coasts.

Because the state stopped stocking coastal streams with rainbow trout four years ago, Magnusen said that anglers have no excuse if caught fishing in coastal streams before the steelhead season opens May 24.

The limit on steelhead during the summer season is 10 fish per day, and during the winter season starting Nov. 16 it is restricted to two steelhead per day. There is no size limit on steelhead.

Mike Wecker, Mike Matson, and Cory Bleisner all had home runs against Pacific Grove to score eight of the Padres' nine runs. Mike Odello was the leading hitter of the game with three hits, including a double.

Greg Raynes pitched an excellent game, giving up only three runs while scattering eight hits. He also struck out five.

In the Robert Louis Stevenson contest, Wecker pitched a very good game, allowing only two hits in five innings.

David Spear came into both games as a relief pitcher and saved each game.

THE TENNIS TEAM kept its lead in league play by crushing Palma and Hollister each 7-0.

THE GOLF TEAM UPPED its record to 5-1 with a win over King City, 265-280.

Pat Parrish had an even par round of 48 over 12 holes to lead the team.

John Pirotte shot 52, Andrew Whitacre 53, Curtis Jones 54, and Brett Langley 58.

THE VARSITY GIRLS' softball team lost its last game to Robert Louis Stevenson, 19-12, while the junior varsity beat RLS 27-8 and then lost to Santa Catalina 16-14.

THE "ATHLETE OF THE WEEK" is Greg Raynes. Raynes is a pitcher on the varsity baseball team.

He pitched an eight-hitter against Pacific Grove, giving up three runs, while walking only two and striking out five.

Raynes also had four hits in five trips to the plate, scoring twice himself.

Special education to be revised

SPECIAL EDUCATION in the Carmel Unified School District will be revised next year, with a completely new program to meet the needs of handicapped students. The change is part of a statewide master plan to be implemented in the fall of 1981.

A special education council will be formed in Monterey County, with representatives from each school district, including Carmel.

Greater attention will be given to interaction between special education students and "normal" students. Greater cooperation from private and public agencies will also be sought.

A major focus will be the removal of the labels and stigma attached to students with severe mental, physical or learning disabilities.

Richard Hawkins, director of pupil personnel services for the Carmel school district outlined the new program to the Board of Education last week.

He noted that there are 195 special education students in Carmel schools, and that number is expected to increase 18 percent in the next five years. "Special education has become a major part of the public edueation system," he said.

When the state developed a master plan for special education six years ago, it required local jurisdictions to design programs to implement it, Hawkins said.

School district officials throughout Monterey County have been working for three years on the comprehensive plan for special education, Hawkins said. A draft of the plan will be submitted to the trustees by June 1. The trustees will have until June 30 to approve the final draft and send it to the state for review.

The plan will be returned for implementation next year.

School districts in Monterey County will operate collectively under the authority of the county Board of Education. State money for the program will be allocated by the county superintendent of schools.

The plan will be managed by a council comprised of superintendents from local school districts and a community advisory committee will be formed to assist. The council will also provide budget advice to the county superintendent.

The designated instruction and the services will include counseling, special physical education, physical therapy, driver training, career preparation and remedial help in reading and math.

Housing for aged is proposed at Scarlett Road

A senior citizen housing project is being proposed for the 20-acre Scarlett Road school site owned by the Carmel Unified School District.

The Seaside Chapter of Lions Club International wants to either purchase the land or secure a long-term lease.

The service club wants to build a subsidized rental housing project on the Monterey Peninsula, according to club chairman Ben Moises, and the Scarlett Road site in Carmel Valley is one of several locations under consideration.

Moises indicated in an April 10 letter to the school district that the housing project would be built in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, and that it would provide 100 percent rent subsidies to senior citizens.

Dr. Carl Wilsey, former superintendent of the Carmel schools, told the Board of Education at its April 22 meeting that the Lions Club would rather lease the land for 50 years than buy it.

The undeveloped school site has been leased for several years, although only on a year-to-year basis. A long-term lease arrangement or sale of the property could be considered, Wilsey said.

The trustees agreed to refer the proposal to the Advisory Committee to Study Sale or Lease of School Facilities. They further recommend that Business Manager Robert Zampatti continue discussions with the Lions Club.

Zampatti told this newspaper after the meeting that the housing project faced "several big hurdles," and that he believed that it had "less than a fifty-fifty chance of success."

Zoning for the site, for example, is rural residential with a maximum density of one unit per 2.5 acres, which would exclude a high-density housing project.

Trustee Doyle Clayton suggested that the school district could request an exemption from the zoning, noting that the surrounding parcels are zoned for one-acre density.

Zampatti said he would forward a request to the Monterey County Planning Department which is currently accepting requests for exemptions to the zoning in the new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Environmental concern becomes an institution

By GLADWIN HILL

A QUESTION SOME ARE SURE to ask skeptically in the less frenetic atmosphere of 1980 is, "Whatever happened to all the environmental enthusiasm we saw in 1970?" — the inference being that somehow the bottom has dropped out.

The answer to that question is simple and impressive: Environmental concern has become institutionalized; it is now an integral part of the national fabric.

Laws and regulations on environmental matters would fill several five-foot shelves. Few sizable projects at the federal, state and even local levels now are launched without environmental-impact assessments. The Environmental Protection Agency is among the largest federal regulatory entities, with 10,000 employees. The Council on Environmental Quality has become a governmental fixture, advising the White House and Congress on policies. On Capitol Hill, the "environmental lobby" is considered one of the most influential.

IN PARTISAN POLITICS, environmental issues figure all the way from presidential campaigns down to city council elections, and repeatedly have tipped close congressional and gubernatorial contests. Every sizable corporation now has to have an environmental division and to devote a lot of time and thought to impacts and policies.

Environmental organizations are growing in membership and scope. National opinion surveys have consistently shown sustained public desire for environmental improvement, even at appreciable cost.

The delusion that environmental concern was an evanescent aberration rested on three myths that still becloud understanding of just what is going on.

Myth No. 1: Environmental quality is an absolute, like pregnancy — you either have or not. This is a convenient misconstruction for opponents of environmental reforms because it sets the stage for false alternatives: "Environment or Economic Development," "Environment or Jobs," where no mutual exclusivity exists.

Environmental quality essentially is a relative matter — a question of choices and tradeoffs. Nobody questions that homes, factories and highways have to be built, trees chopped down, ores mined.

The issue, in each case, is simply: What environmental sacrifices, if any, are involved, and are they worth the result — or is there another way the result could be achieved?

Myth No. 2: "Environmentalism" is an elitist enthusiasm of a small minority of "bird-watchers" and members of arcane groups like the Sierra Club. While conservation organizations have given great impetus to environmental progress, most of them have existed for generations as voices crying in the wilderness. It was not until events such as the 1969 Santa Barbara oil-well blowout generated a tidal wave of public concern about conditions that the environmental revolution burgeoned.

Only this grass-roots constituency made possible the passage of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and ensuing legislation.

Myth No. 3: Environmental reform is a monolithic, unified, integrated "movement" engaged in an Armageddon-like conflict with other values from which it will emerge triumphant or crushed. A casual glance will show that the quest for environmental quality is an immensely ramified, far-flung, fragmented array of efforts on thousands of fronts, ranging from protecting endangered species and corralling oil spills to controlling carcinogenic chemicals and reducing excessive birthrates.

Each day brings countless advances and setbacks, and it is impossible at any given moment to tote up a scorecard and say that "environment," in the short run, is gaining or losing ground.

BECAUSE "ENVIRONMENT" is not some absolute state of grace but an infinite series of choices on how we alter our natural heritage, the quest for environmental quality is not a cause that can ever be counted as "won," so that everybody can sit back and forget about it.

But it is a cause that cannot be lost, given reasonably wise choices. One way or another the effort will continue.

(Gladwin Hill, former national environmental correspondent of "The New York Times", is author of "Madman in a Lifeboat: Issues of the Environmental Crises.")

Did county err on arbor camouflaging trash in CV?

CARMEL VALLEY DISPOSAL Services, Inc., is asking the county Board of Supervisors to overrule the county Planning Commission denial of design approval for a 24-foot high concrete and wood arbor built to camouflage a trash transfer station in Carmel Valley Village.

The case is unusual in that the county apparently erred on a procedural technicality.

The commission approved a use permit for the station, and building permits were issued for the arbor. It was built before the county discovered design approval had not been granted.

The arbor, which cost an estimated $80,000, may have to be dismantled unless the supervisors admit the county erred and grant design approval post facto.

Supervisors are scheduled to consider the appeal at their May 13 meeting.

The arbor was built last year to camouflage a trash recycle and transfer station on Pilot Road owned by Tom Struck and Jim Carroll.

Normal procedure is for the applicant to file for a use permit. Design approval of specific plans and components and issuance of building permits then follow.

Design approval for the arbor was denied in February by the Planning Commission on a 4-1 vote, with one abstention. The majority of the commissioners decided that the arbor "was not compatible with existing uses in the area . . . and that the height of the structure was too imposing."

THE APPEAL FILED on behalf of the disposal company maintains that the arbor was required by the Planning Commission in 1978, and that the county Planning Department erred in allowing it to be built without design approval.

The Carmel Valley law firm of Walker, McClure, Bohnen and Brehmer, representing the owners, claims that the denial in February was "inconsistent with the Planning Commission's previous action in granting a use permit for the facility."

The appeal notes that the Planning Commission conducted a series of public hearings in 1978 to determine the "most appropriate location" for the facility.

Trash from the Village area would be collected at the center, compacted and then hauled by trucks to a county dump. The facility would also include recycling services.

The site on Pilot Road was approved by the commission, subject to nine conditions on hours of operation, alignment of driveways, maintenance to eliminate offensive odor and screening of the facility by fencing or landscaping.

The commission knew from the beginning that the proposed screening of the facility included the arbor, the appeal contends.

architect Sabastian Bordonaro and presented to the commission at its June 28, 1978 meeting. "This model," the appeal states, "included the trellis (arbor) and an eight-foot fence."

According to a transcript of the meeting attached to the appeal, Bordonaro explained to the commission that the arbor would be covered in a fast-growing ivy, and that trees would be planted along the fencing around the facility.

"It is apparent," the appeal states, "that the Planning Commission was anticipating construction of the trellis at the time it granted the use permit for the facility."

The disposal company applied for design approval as required, although the appeal acknowledges that the company applied only for plans on the one-room control building at the site. Design approval for the building was granted by the commission on Aug. 8, 1979.

"The Building Department made a call to the Planning Department to determine whether the arbor/trellis had received design approval . . . the Planning Department somewhat mistakenly gave an affirmative response and the Building Department proceeded to issue all of the building permits needed."

"Next," the appeal states, "Carmel Valley Disposal Services submitted full and complete plans (including those for the trellis) to the Monterey County Building Inspection Department, and requested that it issue any and all building permits required for the construction of the recycle and transfer station."

The county goofed at this point, the appeal contends. It notes: "The Building Department (located in Monterey) made a call to the Planning Department (in Salinas) to determine whether the proposed facility had received design approval.

"The Planning Department, somewhat mistakenly, gave an affirmative response . . . the Building Department proceeded to issue all of the building permits needed," the appeal states.

THE ARBOR WAS "virtually completed" last August when the Building Department was asked to make a final inspection. At that time it was discovered that design approval had not been granted for the arbor. Construction at the site was "red-tagged," final inspection was withheld and a controversy ensued over who was to blame for the technical error.

The Planning Commission's decision that the arbor is not compatible and too imposing is "wholly inappropriate," the appeal contends.

"Not only was the commission aware of the planned use and nature of the trellis at the time it granted the use permit," the appeal states, "but the sole function of the trellis — to provide visual screening of the facility — was actually made an express condition of the permit."

Denial of a routine design approval for the arbor is in violation of the legal doctrine of equitable estoppel, the appeal charges. The county, which granted the permits and required the screening of the facility, cannot be allowed to retract its representation to the disposal company and order the structure dismantled, the appeal notes.

"While acting in good faith reliance on its building permits, Carmel Valley Disposal Service has already completed construction of the trellis at an estimated cost of $80,000," the appeal states. "Retraction (of the permit to build the arbor) will work an unjust hardship upon (the owners)," the appeal adds.

Responsibility for the mistake in issuing the building permits "rests solely with the county," the appeal contends. It adds that the arbor is within the 35-foot height limit. It requests that the Planning Commission denial of design approval for the trellis be overruled.

ATTACHED TO THE appeal is a letter to Bordonaro from Richard Milbrodt, city manager of South Lake Tahoe. Milbrodt notes that he viewed the arbor during a visit to the Monterey Peninsula to inspect the county's solid waste management practices.

He states: "You (Bordonaro) did a laudable job in making the transfer station an asset to the neighborhood. I was particularly impressed by the lattice work. It effectively shields the premises from Carmel Valley Road and offers motorists no sign of the station presence. From the hillsides it offers a pleasant visual amenity."

A resident who spoke at the commission's Feb. 13 meeting called the arbor "a monster," and reaffirmed the demand from several residents in the Village that the structure be "torn down."

Commissioner Bill Peters of Carmel Valley voted with the majority to deny the design approval, stating that the structure was "unbearable." Also voting to deny approval were commissioners Gary Varga and Calvin Reaves and chairman Joe Sullivan.

The appeal notes that both Sullivan and Peters requested screening of the facility at the meetings in 1978, and that Sullivan favored the open arbor design over an enclosed building.

The Legend...

In 1917 fate brought together two great women of our century face to face—Dr. Nadine Payot and the fabled ballerina, Anna Pavlova. "When I met Pavlova, I was struck by the curious difference between her face and body. Her beautiful body was still young and lissome and firm through daily exercise and lack of exposure to the elements, while her face was severely marked by age," reported Dr. Payot. "I was fascinated by the possibility of changing all that." Dr. Payot committed herself to the art and science of helping women protect their skin from moisture loss and protect their facial muscles from premature deterioration by proper massage and exercise. Her methods and preparations were so successful that the rich, the beautiful and the renowned flocked to the "Payot Institut de Beaute", located at the historical mansion of the Countess of Castiglione, where Napoleon III had once climbed incognito up the spiraling staircase to rejoin the Countess. Almost 60 years of success in more than 50 countries have proven the effectiveness of Payot.

Tenants get first leases at Carmel Craft Studios

TENANTS OF CARMEL Craft Studios, San Carlos near Ocean, have expressed "relief" at leases they have negotiated with Dr. Toland Doud, owner of the complex.

It is the first time in the 25-year history of the crafts center formal written leases have been offered tenants.

Fred Klepich, former master-lease holder, rented space to tenants on an informal, month-to-month basis at varying rates. Klepich also owns Studio Art Supplies, which is in the complex.

Dr. Doud is leasing space for $1.50 a square foot a month in the five-year contracts being offered tenants. Some tenants complained earlier they were reluctant to invest in improving their spaces when it was never certain if they would still have a shop at the end of the month under their agreements with Klepich.

Klepich's 25-year master lease agreement expired recently.

Doud said he plans to remodel portions of the complex in January.

Plans include bricking the entrance; redesigning the exterior; a new tile floor for the interior and possible installation of skylights.

Bids are being taken for re-roofing, Doud said.

Tenant Greg Schafer, owner of Carmel Hand Bag Co., said Doud is "pouring money" received from rent back into the complex "to enhance its appearance and hopefully to attract more business."

"Dr. Doud is the most fair and reasonable landlord I have ever dealt with," Schafer said.

Most of the tenants interviewed by the Pine Cone expressed pleasure in their new agreements with Dr. Doud.

Wes Bonenberger, who with his wife Fritzie, owns the Carmel Work Center, a pottery shop, said he has not yet signed his lease.

"I suppose you could say we are going through a period of negotiations," Bonenberger said. "I have some questions as far as the lease is concerned. I am asking for some minor changes."

The Bonenbergers moved out of their previous location in the complex, at the entrance and have moved to the back of the center.

"It is really hard to tell what the move will mean in terms of business," Bonenberger said, "until we get into the season."

"I am holding off signing a lease until I know something more definite about the changes that are going to happen."

Tim Swift, owner of Studio 7, a jewelry shop in the complex, said he was very pleased with the lease with Doud.

"It is a little difficult to make plans for the future when there is no concrete lease agreement with the landlord," he said.

"I am very happy that Dr. Doud has taken over."

THE FORMATION OF A MERCHANT'S ASSOCIATION by tenants of the complex that may include owners of businesses in the Doud Arcade, which adjoins the Carmel Craft Studios and share an entrance on Ocean Avenue, is in the talking stages, according to Greg Schafer.

"It would be like bringing us all together as an entity," Schafer said. "We could discuss our common interests as well as our mutual problems, like extending business hours for both the Doud Arcade and the Craft Studios during the summer months.

"It would provide us with the ability to communicate," Schafer said of the proposed merchant's association.

"We might also share a common directory at both entrances, (Ocean and San Carlos) that would be to everyone's advantage," he said.

Work being done at Carmel Craft Studios includes re-wiring and quadrupling electriicty available to tenants and reducing fire hazard, Schafer said.

Padre sports

By MARK SANFORD

THE CARMEL HIGH varsity baseball team stayed on top of the Mission Trail Athletic League with wins over Pacific Grove, 9-3, and Robert Louis Stevenson, 2-1.

Mike Wecker, Mike Matson, and Cory Bleisner all had home runs against Pacific Grove to score eight of the Padres' nine runs. Mike Odello was the leading hitter of the game with three hits, including a double.

Greg Raynes pitched an excellent game, giving up only three runs while scattering eight hits. He also struck out five.

In the Robert Louis Stevenson contest, Wecker pitched a very good game, allowing only two hits in five innings.

David Spear came into both games as a relief pitcher and saved each game.

THE TENNIS TEAM kept its lead in league play by crushing Palma and Hollister each 7-0.

THE GOLF TEAM UPPED its record to 5-1 with a win over King City, 265-280.

Pat Parrish had an even par round of 48 over 12 holes to lead the team.

John Pirotte shot 52, Andrew Whitacre 53, Curtis Jones 54, and Brett Langley 58.

THE VARSITY GIRLS' softball team lost its last game to Robert Louis Stevenson, 19-12, while the junior varsity beat RLS 27-8 and then lost to Santa Catalina 16-14.

THE "ATHLETE OF THE WEEK" is Greg Raynes. Raynes is a pitcher on the varsity baseball team.

He pitched an eight-hitter against Pacific Grove, giving up three runs, while walking only two and striking out five.

Raynes also had four hits in five trips to the plate, scoring twice himself.

Housing for aged is proposed at Scarlett Road

A senior citizen housing project is being proposed for the 20-acre Scarlett Road school site owned by the Carmel Unified School District.

The Seaside Chapter of Lions Club International wants to either purchase the land or secure a long-term lease.

The service club wants to build a subsidized rental housing project on the Monterey Peninsula, according to club chairman Ben Moises, and the Scarlett Road site in Carmel Valley is one of several locations under consideration.

Moises indicated in an April 10 letter to the school district that the housing project would be built in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, and that it would provide 100 percent rent subsidies to senior citizens.

Dr. Carl Wilsey, former superintendent of the Carmel schools, told the Board of Education at its April 22 meeting that the Lions Club would rather lease the land for 50 years than buy it.

The undeveloped school site has been leased for several years, although only on a year-to-year basis. A long-term lease arrangement or sale of the property could be considered, Wilsey said.

The trustees agreed to refer the proposal to the Advisory Committee to Study Sale or Lease of School Facilities. They further recommend that Business Manager Robert Zampatti continue discussions with the Lions Club.

Zampatti told this newspaper after the meeting that the housing project faced "several big hurdles," and that he believed that it had "less than a fifty-fifty chance of success."

Zoning for the site, for example, is rural residential with a maximum density of one unit per 2.5 acres, which would exclude a high-density housing project.

Trustee Doyle Clayton suggested that the school district could request an exemption from the zoning, noting that the surrounding parcels are zoned for one-acre density.

Zampatti said he would forward a request to the Monterey County Planning Department which is currently accepting requests for exemptions to the zoning in the new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Special education to be revised

SPECIAL EDUCATION in the Carmel Unified School District will be revised next year, with a completely new program to meet the needs of handicapped students. The change is part of a statewide master plan to be implemented in the fall of 1981.

A special education council will be formed in Monterey County, with representatives from each school district, including Carmel.

Greater attention will be given to interaction between special education students and "normal" students. Greater cooperation from private and public agencies will also be sought.

A major focus will be the removal of the labels and stigma attached to students with severe mental, physical or learning disabilities.

Richard Hawkins, director of pupil personnel services for the Carmel school district outlined the new program to the Board of Education last week.

He noted that there are 195 special education students in Carmel schools, and that number is expected to increase 18 percent in the next five years. "Special education has become a major part of the public education system," he said.

When the state developed a master plan for special education six years ago, it required local jurisdictions to design programs to implement it, Hawkins said.

School district officials throughout Monterey County have been working for three years on the comprehensive plan for special education, Hawkins said. A draft of the plan will be submitted to the trustees by June 1. The trustees will have until June 30 to approve the final draft and send it to the state for review.

The plan will be returned for implementation next year.

School districts in Monterey County will operate collectively under the authority of the county Board of Education. State money for the program will be allocated by the county superintendent of schools.

The plan will be managed by a council comprised of superintendents from local school districts and a community advisory committee will be formed to assist. The council will also provide budget advice to the county superintendent.

The designated instruction and the services will include counseling, special physical education, physical therapy, driver training, career preparation and remedial help in reading and math.

Cinderella fantasy planned

A glittering fairy godmother will lead a magical tour that will include visits with a charming prince as well as conniving stepsisters Saturday, May 3 when the Mother Goose Chapter of the Children's Home Society presents a Cinderella fantasy. The fun continues from 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

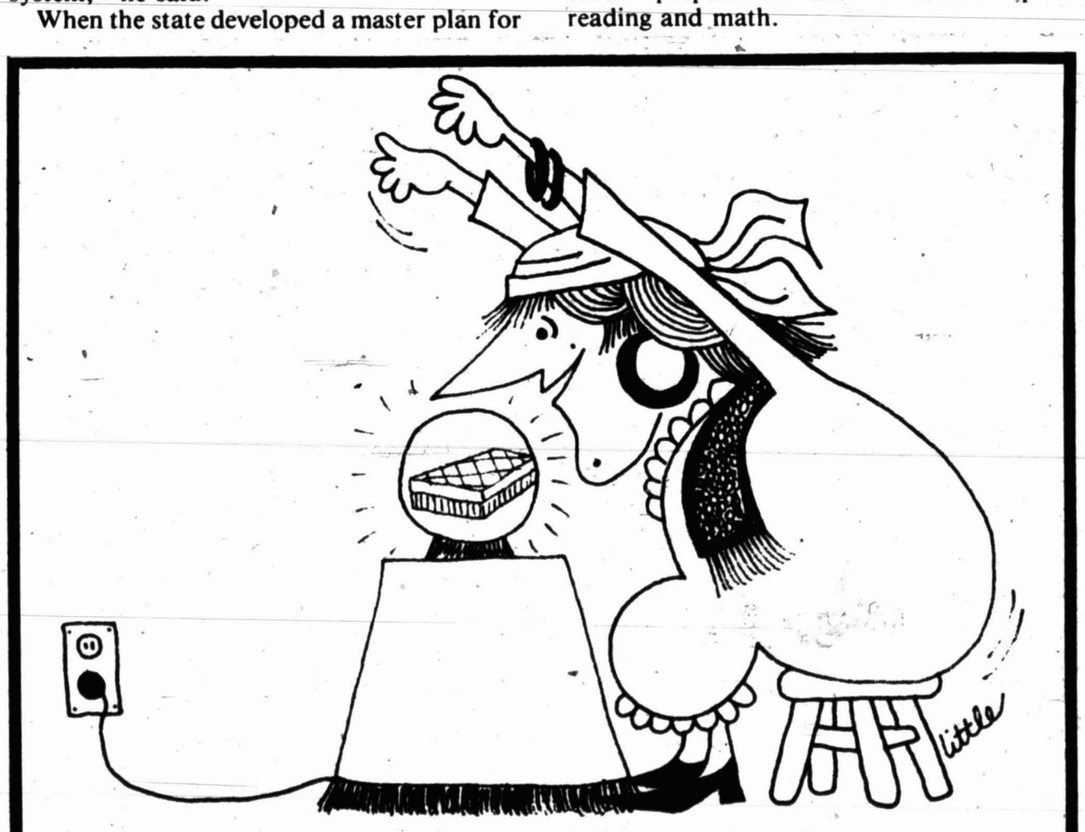

An elegant coach in the shape of a pumpkin will transport tour-goers from the Carmel High School parking lot, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, to a fabulous secret estate.

Stepsisters, the king and queen and Prince Charming will be colorfully costumed as they re-enact the classic fairy tale. And, before everyone's eyes, the fairy godmother will transform Cinderella from a scrubgirl to a princess.

Admission, including transportation, is $1.

Top racers from around the world will again compete in the 1980 Datsun Monterey Triple Crown Saturday and Sunday, May 3-4 in the IMSA GTU Challenge and Champion Spark Plug Challenge as well as the Ford Dealer's Formula Ford race.

Monterey Triple Crown race at Laguna Seca this weekend

The twisting Laguna Seca raceway will quake with the sounds of the 23rd annual Datsun Monterey Triple Crown Saturday and Sunday, May 3-4 when top drivers from around the world race over the 1.9-mile course.

The International Motor Sports Association has sanctioned three events—the IMSA GT Challenge, IMSA GTU Challenge, Champion Spark Plug Challenge and Ford Dealers Formula Ford Challenge — for the weekend of high-speed action on the track 10 miles east of Monterey off Highway 68. The Ford Dealers Formula Ford Challenge will also be raced.

Triple Crown practice rounds begin at 8:30 a.m. both days. Qualifying heats will be run Saturday from 10:30 a.m. and main events begin Sunday at 10 a.m.

• Top road racers Peter Gregg, John Fitzpatrick, Jim Busby, Danny Ongais and others will battle for points and a $40,500 purse in the IMSA GT 100-mile, 53-lap race. The series is for grand touring cars including BMW's, Corvettes, Monzas, Triumph TR-8s and Carreras.

Competition is expected to be especially tight between the turbo-charged Porsche machines driven by Gregg and Ongais. Last year, Ongais clocked the fastest race time winning with an average 106.461 mph lap speed. Gregg placed second, clocking 105.8 mph.

• The GTU (undr 2.5 liter) Challenge race for smaller engine Porsche 911s, 914/6s, Mazda RX-7s, Datsun Zs and ZXs is expected to be especially competitive between racers Frank Leary, Walt Bohren, Brad Friselle and Don Devendorf. Forty cars, lined up two abreast, will begin from a rolling start as they compete in the 75-mile, 39-lap race. The purse is $13,500.

• Sub-compact Datsun B210s, Spirits, Gremlins, Renault Le Cars, Mazda RX-3s, Pintos, Sciroccos and Skyhawks, all subcompacts that race on Goodrich T/A radial street tires, will compete in the Champion Spark Plug Challenge. A hot contest for the $15,000 purse between such drivers as Rob McFarlin, Amos Johnson, Jim Downing, Roger Mandeville and Patrick Jacquemart is expected. The 40-car race continues for 75 miles or 39 laps.

• The Ford Dealers' Formula Ford Challenge for 32 quick and nimble open-wheelers will complete the Monterey Triple Crown weekend. The 48-mile, 25-lap race will be contested by top racers who drive 1600cc Ford Cortina, Capri and Pinto engines with limited modifications for a $6,500 purse.

The Monterey Triple Crown is an annual event organized by the Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula (SCRAMP) to raise funds for local charities.

Tickets are available at Macy's, Del Monte Center, Monterey; BASS and Ticketron outlets and the Emporium, Northridge Shopping Center, Salinas.

Gate tickets are $8 for Saturday, $12 for Sunday and $16 for the two-day combination.

Advance tickets for Sunday are $10 or $14 for both days.

Advance VIP tickets, which include gate, paddock and grandstands, are $30 or $35 at the gate. Grandstand and paddock tickets are, respectively, $6 and $3, Saturday, and $8 and $3 Sunday.

On arrival at Laguna Seca, race fans will find many improvements made to the recreation area since last year. The park has campsites available at the raceway itself for Friday and Saturday nights, May 2 and 3. Weekend ticket holders (general admission or VIP) may purchase a $14 weekend camping permit. The roadway will be open to campers after 6 p.m. on Friday, May 2.

A $7 camping permit may be purchased by weekend ticket holders who arrive at the track on Saturday and Sunday ticket holders who enter the raceway after 6 p.m. on Saturday.

Weekend and Saturday camping will be the only permits issued; no Friday only permits wil be sold. Camping permits are available through the Laguna Seca raceway office or at the raceway on race weekend.

LIKE A POWERFUL COIL, a horse and rider clear a stadium jump at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. The Spring Horse Trials, a three-day event that tests the training and conditioning of horses and riders, is scheduled Friday through Sunday, May 2-4. Dressage tests will begin Friday at 8 a.m. at the center with cross-country competition scheduled Saturday and stadium jumping Sunday. (William C. Brooks photo)

Equestrians compete this weekend in Pebble Beach

Equestrians astride powerful mounts will test their training and conditioning at the annual Spring Horse Trials Friday through Sunday, May 2-4 at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

More than 150 horses and riders schooled for multiple events will participate in the horse show that consists of dressage, cross-country and stadium jumping over three consecutive days. The horses are expected to finish in sound condition.

This year the event is aimed at lower level riders and includes open training, junior and senior divisions, and pre-training, junior and senior divisions, says Abby Foss, director of the Equestrian Center.

Competition is graduated, with increasing demands put on horses and riders as they progress from pre-training through intermediate divisions. Dressage tests become more difficult; the distances covered and fenced jumped on cross-country and stadium phases become longer and higher.

Dressage tests will be ridden Friday, May 2 at 8 a.m. at the Equestrian Center. Dressage is the classic art of horsemanship that seeks to produce a relaxed, confident, supple and free-moving horse. At the higher levels, horses are capable of performing the beautiful, dance-like movements associated with the Spanish Riding School of Vienna.

The cross-country phase of competition is scheduled Saturday, May 3 at 8 a.m. Riders must guide their horses over a pre-measured distance of "roads and tracks," along courses through Del Monte Forest.

The cross-country course will include the Spyglass sand pit, which is two miles long, and the pre-training course that continues to the sand dunes and back to the Equestrian Center.

Stadium jumping at the Equestrian Center begins Sunday, May 4 at 8 a.m. A variety of jumps is arranged with heights varying according to the training levels of the horses.

Winners of the Spring Horse Trials will be the entrants who have accumulated the fewest penalty points in the three phases of the three-day event.

Spectators are welcome to observe the competition all three days. There is no charge other than the $4-per-car gate fee at the entrance to 17 Mile Drive. There are bleachers to observe stadium jumping and dressage.

The Pebble Beach Pony Club will serve refreshments to spectators.

The Equestrian Center is located north of The Lodge at Pebble Beach at the intersection of Portola Road and 17 Mile Drive.

Music lovers can expect exciting concert season

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

WITH CURRENT SEASON CONCERTS yet to go, three announced 1980-81 seasons are already mouth-watering.

Since all three — Monterey County Symphony, Carmel Music Society and Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula — are hard at recruiting for this fall, one best not dally about getting tickets.

Horacio Gutierrez, a rising star and already-recorded pianist, (a native of Cuba but an established artist in Los Angeles) will appear with the Monterey County Symphony Oct. 12-14 in the Concerto No. 20 in D Minor by Mozart. That concert will also include Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony and the Iphigenia in Aulis Overture by Gluck (revised, romantically, by Wagner).

Violinist Ida Kavafian, an active member of the Tashi Ensemble, will perform in mid-November the irresistible Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in E Minor, and the orchestra will offer the Castor and Pollux Suite by Rameau (a rarely represented French Baroque type) and the virtuosic masterpiece of Bela Bartok's last years, the Concerto for Orchestra.

An All American Night in late January will feature excerpts from Porgy and Bess with soprano Joy Simpson and baritone James Tyeska. Copland's Billy the Kidd and one of Barber's Essays for Orchestra will fill out the program.

World-famous hornist Barry Tuckwell will be soloist in concerts at the beginning of March, playing Mozart's Third Concerto and the First Concerto by Richard Strauss. The unusual program will also include the Haydn Symphony No. 86 in D, Debussy's Afternoon of a Faun and Estancia by Alberto Ginastera.

Gifted pianist Juliana Markova will appear in the Concerto No. 2 by Shostakovich in early April. This delightful piece will be heard between Britten's Matinees Musicales (a Rossini inspired bon-bon) and the great Symphonie Fantastique of Hector Berlioz.

The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society will join the orchestra in early May for Carl Orff's perennial Carmina Burana. Baritone William Ramsey, also a favorite here, will be soloist and will also sing the Songs of a Wayfarer by Mahler.

The Monterey County Symphony is now accepting season ticket renewals and new orders, but be advised the Sunset Theater series (Monday nights) has been a sellout for years and that King Hall (Sunday nights) is expected to be a sellout this coming season. The Symphony phone is 624-8511.

ANOTHER SUPERB SEASON is that of the Carmel Music Society. Opening Sept. 25 will be the young Russian sensation Shlomo Mintz. You will have a chance to hear him on KWAV-FM June 9 as soloist with the Chicago Symphony in the Bruch Concerto in G Minor.

Internationally-renowned opera and lieder baritone Hermann Prey will sing Nov. 13. In addition to performing a repertoire ranging from Bach to Mozart to Schubert to Viennese operetta, Prey has appeared in this country with increasing frequency as a concert soloist.

The Southwest German Chamber Orchestra with conductor Paul Angerer and pianist Michael Ponti will perform Feb. 19. Angerer and the orchestra have made many recordings that are first-rate, and so has Ponti in an independent career. This collaboration looks like one of the tastiest of the year.

One of America's most extraordinary pianists is Murray Perahia, whose reputation is well documented through a variety of outstanding recordings, most recently a superb series of Mozart piano concertos on Columbia records. Perahia will play March 24.

Judy Lin, winner of this year's Young California Artist Competition, will finish the season May 23. Miss Lin is a student of Jorge Bolet, and her virtuosity, sensitivity and maturity were obvious in the contest in late March. She proved to be an artist of subtlety and temperament, and clearly deserved first prize.

The Carmel Music Society season ticket drive is on now. All concerts will be at Sunset Theater. The phone is 624-2085.

ENJOYING A CONSISTENTLY ardent following, the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula will offer another outstanding season at Sunset Theater. Season tickets are now offered for six excellent events.

The brilliant Tokyo String Quartet will make its second appearance for the society in the opening concert Oct. 6. The Tokyo needs scarcely any introduction. It is enjoying a worldwide reputation and has made many recordings.

On Nov. 5 the Ko-Kela Piano Quartet from Los Angeles will include two recent Bach Festival participants, violist Myra Kestenbaum and pianist William Doppmann. Doppmann played one of the Bach partitas last July in what was a sensation of the festival. Joining them are Peter Rejto, cello, and Clayton Haslop, violin.

Jan. 22 will have the Seraphim Piano Trio with violinist Edith Peinemann, an artist of long and international experience and of several recordings, pianist edward Auer and cellist Yehuda Hanani.

On Feb. 8 the Fresk String Quartet from Stockholm will appear. This ensemble was established in 1965 by principal violinist Lars Fresk.

The annual Ensemble Awards Concert will be presented April 5, culminating a weekend competition.

The season finale will be a concert by members of the London Early Music Group directed by James Tyler. This April 30 program will feature Renaissance music with an emphasis on English composers and will include a vocalist. Tyler and the Music Group have several excellent recordings to their credit, including a superb 1978 collection on RCA called What Pleasure Have Great Princes.

The Chamber Music Society phone is 624-2993. The mailing address is Box 6283, Carmel 93921.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV-FM 96.9

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

SAVE THE GAMMON

You, White, roll 5-3 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

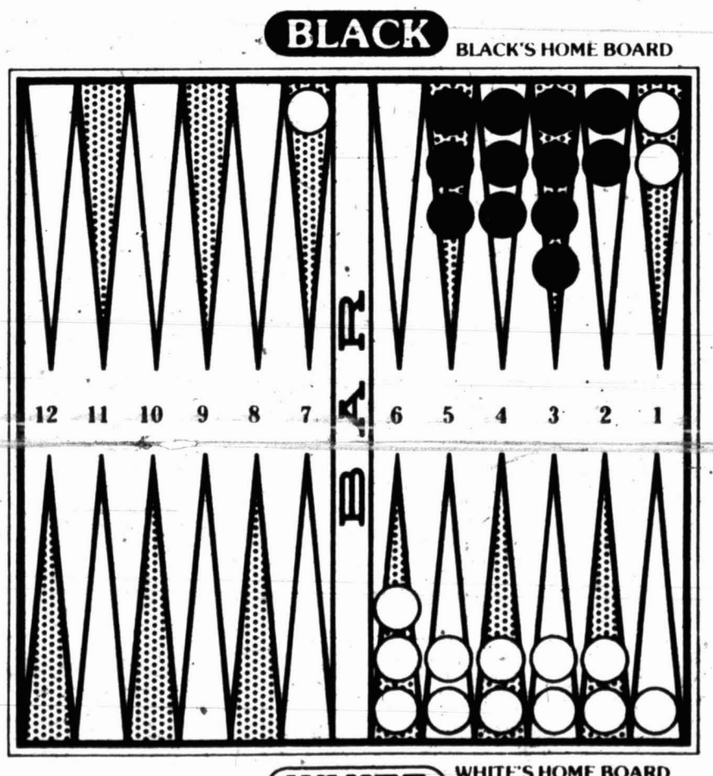

You are tempted to close your board with the five and take only the three with the blot on Black's bar point.

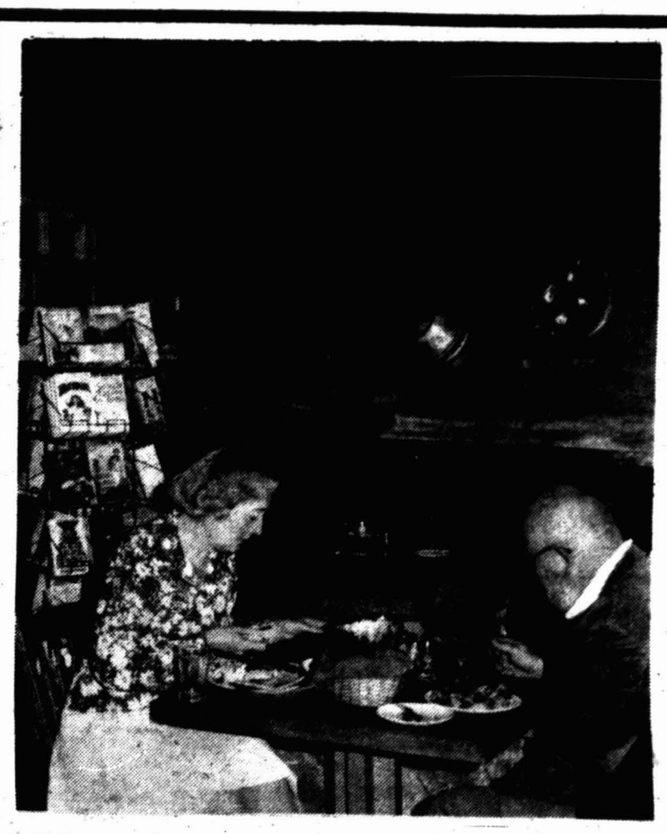

The wiser course is to take the entire move with the blot.

You must plan to get that blot into your home board and then take one man out of Black's board as soon as possible thereafter. If you get a shot at Black, one man on his 1-point is almost as good as two; and your home board will be good enough with just five points made.

If you don't get a shot at Black very soon you must get ready to get out of his board altogether in order to save the gammon. Using this full roll to run may make the difference between losing a single game and being gammoned.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

History making venture in Napa Valley wines

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

ON SUNDAY, APRIL 13, in Santa Barbara, Baron Philippe de Rothschild of Bordeaux celebrated his 78th birthday quietly with a few close friends. On Wednesday, April 16, in the India Suite of the Stanford Court Hotel, with Robert Mondavi, 66, of Oakville, these two internationally celebrated, creative winemakers announced the signing of an agreement for a "joint venture" of winemaking in the Napa Valley.

Many Americans have invested substantially in winemaking endeavors in France, notably the Clarence Dillon family's ownership of Chateau Haut-Brion, but the Mondavi-Rothschild California joint venture is the first time in history a First Growth French winery of Bordeau has made a major alliance in our country.

"At the beginning," Baron Philippe told us, "it was but a castle in the air. As long as 10 years ago, I cherished this idea. Such a thought develops in two stages, first the idea, and next the realization. One is as difficult as the other. Like everything else in nature, the idea needed to mature," he said. "It took 20 years at Mouton to achieve my goals. With the Americans, there are always smiles, everything is smoothed out in a jiffy!"

For this joint venture, that "jiffy" was two years in which Baron Philippe and Robert Mondavi implemented the idea, sharpening the focus into a working reality, the end product being a single red table wine, to be produced in the Napa Valley, bearing their signatures.

THIS IS NOT THE first public announcement of the "idea" itself; some mention of the possible joint venture was released in an exclusive Los Angeles Times story by financial editor Carl Cannon earlier this year, before the signing of any agrement. We have deliberately opened our Mondavi-Rothschild story giving the chronological status of the participants only as a dynamically rich aspect of this union. One brief newspaper column cannot begin to encompass in thumbnail descriptions the appropriateness of this creative endeavor.

From almost day one, before the roofs were over the Cliff May-designed Robert Mondavi Winery in Oakville, when the first stainless steel fermenters received the crush of the first vintage in 1966, we have watched our Stanford '36 contemporary restlessly, vigorously, intensely pursue his goals of getting more and more of the potential of the grape into each of his wines. In 1972, at a tasting of Cabernet Sauvignon wines for the Robert Lawrence Balzer Private Guide to Food & Wines, a panel of 12 winemakers gave first position to the Robert Mondavi 1969 Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon over 32 other contenders.

The landmark victory involved more than the production of a fine wine. The full, round breed of the wine told the knowing something of Mondavi's belief that the role of a red table wine should be, beyond the grape, its harmony with food.

Across the Atlantic, in the community of Bordeaux, our first visit to the chateau Mouton-Rothschild in 1951. It was the cool, gray-sky weather of winter, but as we walked the vine-rows being pruned for the coming spring growth, wondering whether these were Cabernet or Merlot vines, we asked an elderly vineyard worker, bent over in bonnet and scarf against the cold, "What vines are these?" She straightened up as tall as her age would permit to declare, "Mouton, M'sieu, Mouton!" Such pride was evidenced everywhere.

Through the following years, we watched as Baron Philippe and the late Baroness Pauline de Rothschild created, in addition to the fine wine, a museum from one of the chais, bringing together the joyous evidence of man's delight in wine, in paintings, tapestry, gold, ivory, stone, crystal and silver, from Egyptian dynasties to the most contemporary graphic arts. A Bacchanale by Picasso became the label feature of the 1973 vintage as Mouton became elevated to First Growth Status from Baron Philippe's dedicated years of work toward this goal.

It was inevitable that if these two men would meet, in wine, the synthesis of their beliefs would find a creative center. The current "joint venture" is that realization.

LUCIENNE SIENNEAU, the winemaker of Mouton, made three visits to the Robert Mondavi Winery, working closely with Tim Mondavi, Robert's son, today's winemaker at Oakville. Together, they agreed upon a style of winemaking procedures. With those new wines, from 150 lots, blind tasted, they selected 25 potential wines for the joint venture selection, from three different properties of Mondavi holdings, to be carved out for this separate, newly created label.

The final wine, they agreed, would be 83 percent Cabernet Sauvignon, largely from vines contiguous to the Robert Mondavi Winery, and 17 percent Cabernet Franc from parcels nine miles southeast of the winery. No Merlot. The first vintage would be 1979, about 2,000 cases.

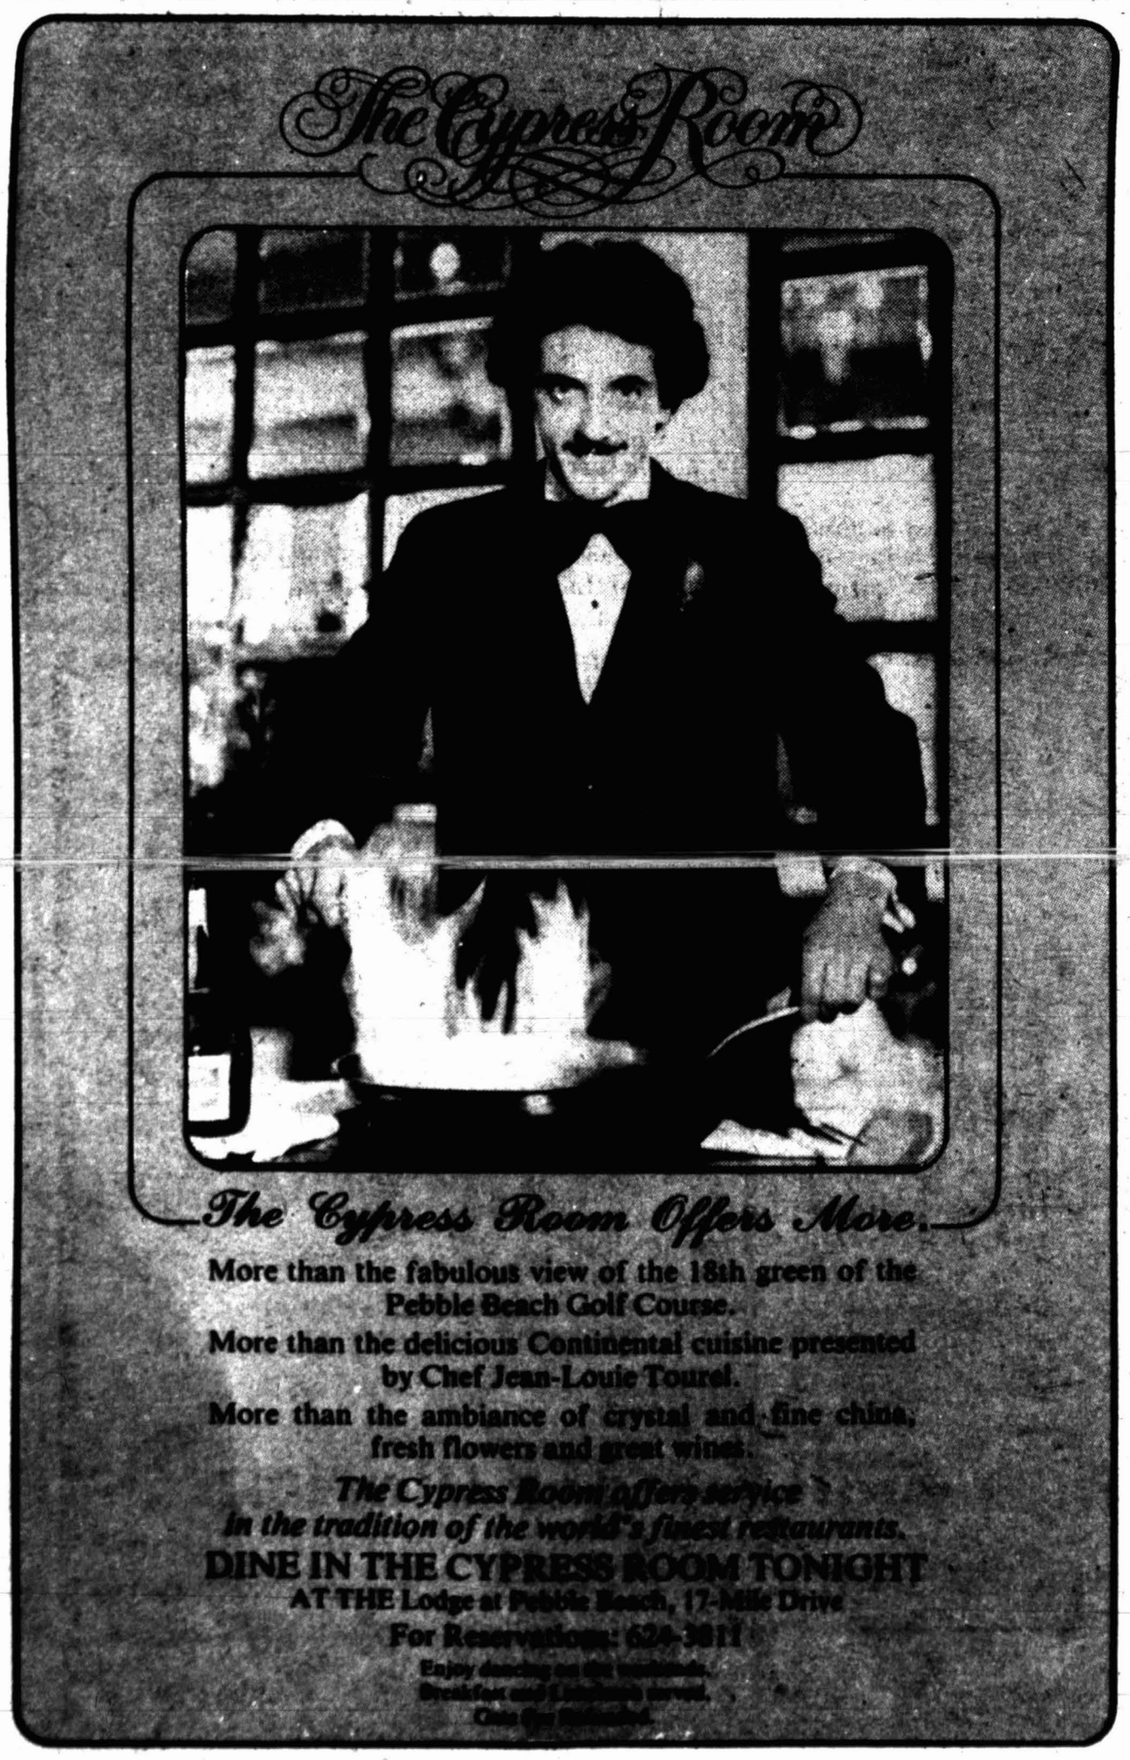

All too often, it was agreed, California Cabernet Sauvignon wines are too big, too much color, too much nose, overwhelming any food with which they might be served. "This helped build the white wine boom," Miklos Dora, Baron Philippe's American agent, told us. "Those monster wines often do well in tastings, but subtlety is down-counted."

"The wine we produce in 1990," Baron Philippe told us, "will be quite different from the wine we produce in 1980. Nothing is definite. We are doing our best with life, and life is teaching us what to do. It will not be a 'Cabernet Sauvignon' varietal label." With a certain sparkle in his eyes, he concluded, "The black label for the first two years will describe the founding characters." We laughed together and wondered if that wouldn't need Jereboams and Methusalehs to accommodate the legend. "One thing is certain," he said, "we will have lots of fun."

Photographers and reporters from Paris Match and Le Figaro flew from Paris for the San Francisco press conference announcement. An open long-distance line between Paris and San Francisco linked the two countries and the two famlies. In their toasting glasses in Paris, Michael Mondavi, president of the Robert Mondavi Winery, with Philippine de Rothschild, the baron's daughter, lifted 1970 Mouton-Rothschild and 1973 Robert Mondavi Cabernet Sauvignon Reserve as the two major parties to the joint venture did likewise in California. The label? It might incorporate the Mouton ram and the California bear — and the wine will always be a conversation piece when wine lovers meet.

Concert, art exhibit, stitchery at Sunset Center

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

THE FINAL CONCERT of the Monterey County Symphony will take place at the Sunset Theater on Monday night, May 5 at 8 p.m. The program will include the Overture to The Bartered Bride by Smetana, the Symphony No. 1 in C-Minor of Johannes Brahms and the Piano Concerto No. 2 of Frederic Chopin. The soloist for the piano concerto will be Eugene Istomin making his first appearance on this series.

"Welcome to the Pinnacle, Mr. Istomin." The Olympian praise from a leading Chicago critic is typical of the unanimous acclaim accorded Eugene Istomin which has earned him a unique place in the pantheon of great American pianists. Since his dazzling debut at the age of 17 with both the Philadelphia and New York Philharmonic Orchestras, Istomin's three decades of performances as orchestral soloist, recitalist and chamber music player have taken him repeatedly to every part of the world and established him "as one of the leading international artists of our time."

Eugene Istomin was born in New York City of Russian parents, both of whom were professional singers. At age 6, his aptitude for piano was recognized by Alexander Siloti, the eminent Russian pianist, whose daughter, Kiriena, became Istomin's first teacher. Later he attended Professional Children's School in Manhattan and the Mannes School of Music. At age 12, he was accepted by the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia where he studied with Rudolf Serkin and Mieczyslav Horscowski.

In 1943, he won both the Philadelphia Orchestra's Youth Contest and the Leventritt Award, making his debut that same year with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra. This was followed by a performance with the New York Philharmonic under Artur Rodzinski.

Soon afterward, he had the fare privilege of performing and recording major piano concerti with such renowned conductors as Fritz Reiner, Charles Munch, Pablo Casals, Adolf Busch and Bruno Walter (with whom he recorded the Schumann Concerto, one of only two recordings Walter ever made with a piano soloist). In 1950, Pablo Casals invited Istomin to perform in the Prades Festival in France. The youngest artist on the program, he shared honors with Dame Myra Hess, Clara Haskil, Serkin, Joseph Szygeti and many others. Casals proclaimed him "among the greatest pianists" and thus began a lifelong friendship with the great cellist-conductor.

In 1956, Istomin made the first of his annual world tours, which cover as many as 100,000 miles a year and include all the major cities, orchestras and festivals of the United States, Europe and the Far East. Of the 24 recordings he has made for Columbia Records, the Rachmaninoff 2nd with Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra became a national bestseller. In 1961, he formed a legendary piano trio with Isaac Stern and Leonard Rose.

His non-musical interests include painting, baseball and current political affairs. His longtime friend, the late Arnold Toynbee, wrote of him: "He is continually on the move and this over vast distances, criss-crossing the surface of the globe year after year. When he is not travelling, he is practicing. He is a dedicated artist but he is a human being first. His capacity for friendship is one of his notable characteristics; the breadth of his interests in another, a perpetual interest in the general course of human affairs, outside of his own field. This is an important fact about the man. I also feel sure that it is also an important feature of his professional life—one of the features that accounts for his high distinction."

In 1975, Mr. Istomin married Marta Casals, the late Don Pablo's widow, and they reside in New York City.

THE MONTEREY COUNTY SYMPHONY will also present the lobby show during the month of May. The show will present the drawings of George de Groat, artist-in-residence at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

He is most prominent in the art world, having achieved recognition not only through the execution and exhibition of his own work, but also through his nurturing and encouraging the talents of others. He has taught in Los Angeles at the Art Center of Design, California State University at San Diego and at Otis Art Institute in Los Angeles. His work has been shown throughout the world; drawings and paintings have been widely published; he has appeared as author and reviewer in numerous newspapers and periodicals.

Currently the recipient of a Ford Foundation grant enabling him to explore new directions in color-field painting, Mr. De Groat excels in figure painting. "Abstract shapes are created to combine traditional composition with the current approach to designing a painting as a unity in itself; a bridge, as it were, between traditional and contemporary concepts."

The oil paintings in this exhibit are Mr. De Groat's impression of musicians. While viewing concerts on Public Service Television, he became fascinated by the way musicians held their instruments and the vivid contrast in their black-and-white clothing. He began sketching, and the resulting paintings were based upon color, shapes, appearances, facial expressions and body attitudes, and gestures of the musicians playing their various instruments.

Brooks' evocative watercolors capture the atmosphere of the scenes he depicts, from the riotous color of a Hong Kong boat wedding, with giant banners fluttering and people crowding about to the earthy simplicity of an Idaho farm with its American weathered barn. His style is delicate when picturing a lighthouse on a stormy day and strong when re-creating the colors of a Mexican marketplace.

The Keiths were assigned many posts in the foreign service, including Seville, Calcutta, Ankara, Bogota, Bern, London and the first diplomatic mission to Warsaw after World War II.

Mrs. Keith leaves a sister, Mrs. Robert Cook of Fayetteville, N.Y.

She was a volunteer worker with the Red Cross in World War I, a nurse's aide in World War II and, since moving to Carmel, a charter member of the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula Auxiliary, where she received a 4,000-hour service pin. Mrs. Keith had been a member of the Abrego Club in Monterey and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

She will be buried in the Keith family plot in Brockton, Mass.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, the Visiting Nurses Association or Wells College in Aurora, N.Y.

CHRISTOPHER BOCK

REAL ESTATE

Villa Favorita

An extended, semi-circular, walled drive sweeps up to this spectacular 44-year-old home. A magnificent balcony, 6 bays wide, supported by 25 carved beams, spreads above the entrance and looks down on the parking plaza and out across the trees to the Valley, the Santa Lucia Mountains and the sea.

The entrance is a paneled colonial door flanked by carriage lamps, framed by Doric pilasters and a carved pediment. On this lower level are (a) the tiled entrance hall, (b) the outsized 2 car garage, (c) a charming rumpus room with 4 built-in bunks, a raised fireplace, beamed and planked ceiling, carpeted floors and (d) a decorative small bath with shower. The playroom is 20 x 25 and seems cozy!

A circular colonial stair rises from the entrance hall to the second level. This 2 story well is a miniature cathedral with great stained glass window, octagonal shape and planked ceiling. At the top a hall opens through double doors to the balcony. Or you can turn right toward, the 3 bedrooms and tremendous 3-room bath complex. The latter looks toward the hills and sea, and a mirrored ceiling gives one the odd feeling it goes up and up. Other mirrors add to the illusion.

Bedrooms are either plank-walled or finished with heavy vinyl paper. All are carpeted, all have plank ceilings, one has a charming corner fireplace.

A left turn at the top of the stair brings you into the cathedral beamed living room: deepset picture window facing south, virginal white fireplace on the north wall, spacious shelves all about, and extraordinary floors of straight grain random planks stained a cedar red. Beyond this is an enormous, tile-floored solarium: beamed ceilings again, the other side of the stained glass window, 3 skylights, and glass wall opening to a gigantic brick patio with space for all kinds of outdoor living.

The kitchen occupies the east side, a long pullman style spanning the house: breakfast nook toward the south, glass door to patio on the north, tiled walls, oak floors, butcher block counters, Jenn-Air range and stainless steel appliances.

There are dozens of "touches". Surprise closets, cabinets galore, custom made brass hardware, many deepset windows with window seats, shutters, woodwork one seldom finds, mirrored doors, cedar-lined closet. There's a 3rd bath off the back bedroom, which also opens to the solarium.

This splendid home sits on more than ½ acre which slopes down to Hatton Road. The number is 25855. The price is $479,500.

Carmel Highlands

Surf surging along the shore of Yankee Point, also the open ocean beyond, are framed by windows in this home with path to a private beach below, exterior and shake roof of cedar, an expansive deck for outdoor pleasure.

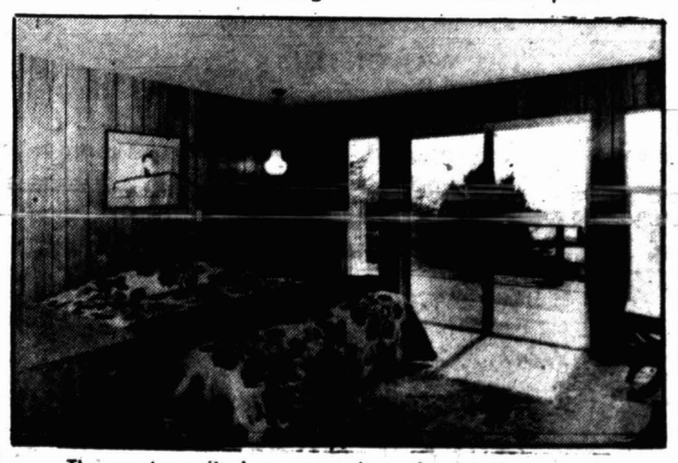

In the living room are beamed ceiling, stone fireplace, a tile floor and the handsome pecan paneling enhancing almost all rooms of the entire, 2,208 sq. ft. interior.

Extending beyond the dining room is this tile-floored family room featuring sliding glass doors to the deck, a window wall for seeing sunsets and spouting whales.

Tiled walls and countertops, custom cabinets, built-in appliances distinguish the kitchen divided, by a brick barbecue, from the dining room with Franklin fireplace.

The master suite has ocean view, glass door access to the deck. Two more carpeted bedrooms, second bathroom, entry and sewing/laundry/utility area complete living space. In addition is a double garage with a workshop and genie door control. Other attractions of this high quality home are central vacuum and exterior lighting systems, parking court off a circular driveway leading past pines on the low-care-landscaped site—$495,000.

WHO'S NEWS

. . . on the Carmel business scene

By FLORENCE MASON

THE SHOE BOX
Wayne and Uta Stoddard

ANOTHER COUPLE WHO "fell in love with the Monterey Peninsula" and watched for an opportunity to go into business here has realized its dreams.

Wayne and Uta Stoddard, new owners of The Shoe Box on the west side of Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, say, "The gods shown on us." For the past two years, Wayne had been buyer and merchandiser for that store as well as several others on the Peninsula. Then he and his wife took over ownership of The Shoe Box at midnight on April 1 and were in business for themselves at 9 o'clock the next morning.

Wayne's whole business career has been associated with active sports. He was sporting goods buyer for Meier and Frank ("the Macy's of Oregon") in Portland, and then became western sales manager for Clossco, Inc., importer and distributor for Adidas. The Shoe Box was one of Clossco's best accounts; Wayne had many opportunities to get to know the store and the area even before he became buyer-merchandiser. He and Uta even had time to find a home in Pebble Beach.

"Uta's background is important to the operation, too," Wayne said. She was head of the women's fashion design department for Pendleton Woolen Mills.

The Shoe Box has been in the same location for 17 years and the Stoddards decided to keep the familiar name. However, it is much more than a shoe store now; it's a complete active sports shop for the entire family.

In the Stoddards' case, "entire family" includes a seven-year-old son, Dirk, who attends Forest Grove School in Pacific Grove.

PRESTIGE PROPERTIES
Wendy and Charles Lazer, Brokers
Diane Robinson, Realtor Associate

"THINGS JUST SORT of came together for us; it snowballed," said Diane Robinson.

Diane was thinking about going into real estate; Wendy and Charles Lazer — who had been in the real estate business for many years — were thinking about opening their own offices at the time they met Diane.

"The perfect location" (on San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth) became available and that did it . . . Prestige Properties was launched.

The Lazers came from San Jose originally. They were in real estate there and then with a Carmel firm for about 9½ years. Following a brief foray into another type of business they returned to real estate about a year and a half ago. Their home is in Pebble Beach and they have two married children.

Partner Diane Robinson is looking forward to becoming a broker herself, "in about six months." She is a product of Monterey public schools and MPC. She now lives in San Benancio with her husband and the youngest of their three daughters, a senior at Salinas High School.

Before becoming interested in real estate, Diane was a school secretary and had helped in her husband's plumbing business in Monterey.

Talk about a slowdown in the real estate market doesn't disturb the partners in Prestige Properties. They are confident that things will pick up again soon.

"The high interest rates won't stay there," Diane said. "They are already showing signs of coming down."

Also, their premise in starting the business was that the desirability of properties in Carmel and Pebble Beach, the areas in which they specialize, will not be substantially or permanently affected by the ups-and-downs of the economy.

ESSENCE BOUTIQUE
Mary Jean Kalin

Ownership of Essence Boutique is a major change in direction for Mary Jean Kalin.

Most recently, she and her family ran a ski resort at Mammoth Lakes. Before that, she and her husband were technicians with the National Marine Fisheries Service.

A fisheries research program that was not refunded turned the Kalins to the Mammoth Lakes resort. It was "too much snow" that brought them to Carmel. They had been watching ads for business opportunities and saw this as an excellent one. No snow, to be sure, and it's also possible that a city by the sea was a special lure for them.

Mrs. Kalin said the shop will continue to offer many of the same kinds of clothes and accessories offered by the previous owner, and some new specialties as well. The shop — on the west side of San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth — is featuring hand-woven products, the Ted Lapidus line of Paris boutique items, and in the winter it will include some Italian designer sweaters. Moderately-priced clothing for career women and for everyday wear is also offered.

The whole Kalin family was involved in running the ski resort at Mammoth. However, the Essence Boutique is Mrs. Kalin's project. Of the four Kalin children, only one — Nicholas, a student at Carmel High School — is still at home.

MAY DAY FESTIVAL AT SCHOOL TODAY

Filled with the romance, beauty and gaiety of Elizabethan games, Sunset School's Old English May Festival starts this afternoon at 2 p.m. on the school grounds.

For days, members of the faculty and several hundred children have been rehearsing a May festival guaranteed to take one back to the days of the 16th century when Queen Elizabeth lorded over Merrie England.

The delightful manner in which the festival is produced is due largely to the fine ability and strenuous effort of the two producers, Miss Madeline M. Currey, who supervised the music, and Miss Jean Wallace, who coached the dances and action. Those in charge express appreciation to the mothers, who graciously gave their time, and the board of trustees, who made the festival possible.

CITY BANKERS BANK ON JOB HERE

Contact with Carmel in the process of founding a new bank here has provided the Hughes brothers with a number of surprises. For instance, such experiences as this do not occur in Salinas.

"When it became known we intended opening a unit in Carmel," said Andy Hughes, "we were literally besieged by big city bankers, men of considerable reputation and importance in financial circles, who wanted the job of running it. There were men whose ambition in life, apparently, was some day to live in Carmel. To accomplish this high aim they offered to work for a mere fraction of their present income."

THE WAR OF THE POSIES

The contest of the gardeners, with flowers their ammunition, and spade and hoe the implements of war, is now waging recklessly in Carmel. Already more than 20 contestants are entered in the fray with May 15 the last day for filing a declaration of war. The determination of the winners will be made by professional judges in the third week of May.

There is a place in the jolly combat for every kind of flower garden and all sorts of gardeners. So long as the flowers grown are in Carmel, Hatton Fields, Carmel Point, La Loma Terrace or Carmel Woods, anyone may enlist. This is not restricted to members of the Garden Section of the Woman's Club — not restricted at all, in fact. And there is a classification for nearly every kind of garden, with prizes for winners of each class.

BOARD PROPOSES TO CLOSE BAY SCHOOL

Letters are being mailed out today to inform parents in the Highlands that since there are only 11 pupils at Bay School, the board proposes to close the school temporarily at the end of this term, and bring the teacher in to teach at River School.

This arrangement will save the district about $6,000.

PRESBYTERIANS TO LAY CORNERSTONE OF NEW CHURCH SUNDAY

The Carmel Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. Harry Clayton Rogers, pastor, extends to everyone an invitation to the special church services on Sunday at the Carmel Woman's Club which will offer tributes to all mothers.

The congregation will then adjourn to the new building site, Junipero, Mountain View and Ocean Avenue, where Dr. Jesse Feiring Williams, chairman of the building committee, will receive for the church the cornerstone from James Pruitt, the architect of Comstock Associates. Dr. Williams will also present, as the speaker representing the Monterey Peninsula, Col. Allen Griffin.

CARMEL TEACHERS GRANTED $14,030 INCREASE IN NEW SALARY SCHEDULE

Carmel school board, at a special meeting Monday night, granted a $14,030 teachers' salary increase and adopted all other provisions of the new salary schedule proposed by the teachers. Total teacher payroll for 1955-56 will be $330,000. This is $47,096 greater than this year's, but $33,066 of it represents salaries for six new teachers and automatic raises and bonuses earned under the old salary schedule, and would have had to be paid whether or not the new schedule was accepted.

There was one dissenting vote. Chairman of the Board J.O. Handley said he thought the teachers deserved the raise, but the board has "no business spending money it doesn't have."

NUDITY ORDINANCE TESTED BY COUNCIL

To the intense disappointment of local space rate correspondents for the city papers, the Carmel City Council provided no circus for them last night when the proposed ordinance requiring men to wear more than just bathing trunks in the business district came up on the agenda at the end of a long session devoted to more important matters.

Councilman John Chitwood said, "I think we had a lot of fun out of this and we could study it for the next 20 years with profit. I move we table it."

UTILITIES GOING UNDERGROUND

The third phase in a 20-year plan to place all utilities underground in the business district was given the apparent green light when the City Council voted Wednesday night to hold public hearings on June 3 for the third increment of the project.

This phase of the project encompasses most of the area on Sixth between Junipero and San Carlos. Included are Devendorf Park, Purity Market, the Carmel Fire Department building, the Hearthstone Restaurant, a service station on the corner of Sixth and Mission and adjacent buildings.

The master plan for undergrounding the utilities was put into action some six years ago. Among the other benefits of this project is the beautification of the business district.

CLASH AT TOWN MEETING

The rising narcotics traffic in Carmel and other problems troubling young people were discussed at a "Town Meeting" Monday at Carmel High School.

Most of the controversy centered around the establishment of a coffee house in Carmel, which would serve as a meeting place for the "street people" who have been "hanging around" the business district to the annoyance of residents and business operators alike.

Carmel Police Chief Klaumann stated, "Our main problem with youth is drugs; our second biggest problem is theft to support the drug habit.

"This all started when the transients began using Carmel as a stopping off place between Haight Ashbury and Big Sur," Klaumann said. "These kids don't use the Youth Center, they loiter around the business district. Why do they have to congregate on the main street in town? I just don't understand it," he said.
